4000 Planes Hit 19 Vital Rail Centers

Most Devastating Blow Yet Dealt German Military Transportation

BULLETIN

London, May 11 (AP).—The U. S. Strategic Air Force announced tonight that 16 heavy bombers and 10 fighters were missing from today's widespread operations of the Eighth Air Force and that 18 enemy planes were shot down.

London, May 11 (AP).—Four thousand American and British planes dealt the Nazi military transportation system its most devastating blow of the war today, dropping 7000 tons of bombs on 19 vital railroad centers and on airfields and other installations just behind the Atlantic wall.

Seven of the railway targets were hit late this afternoon by a force of possibly 1000 Flying Fortresses and fighters which raided the yards at Brussels and Liege in Belgium, Luxembourg in the Duchy of that name, Sarreguemines in France, and Saarbruecken, Ehrang and Konz in Germany's Saar basin.

The widespread attacks against railroad centers certainly were the heaviest ever launched against the enemy's communications system, and as reports of the day's operations continued to flow from air headquarters there were indications that this might prove to have been the biggest day of the war for aircraft based in Britain.

First Triple-Hheader

The American Ninth Air Force for the first time launched three major attacks in one day, using Marauders, Havocs, Thunderbolt divebombers and Lightning fighters in its all-day operations that dropped more than 600 tons of bombs.

Over most of Europe an unusual heat haze added to bombardiers' problems. Returning airmen said air opposition was light but anti-aircraft fire was heavy in spots.

Indicating further onslaughts, German radio tonight warned that new formations were approaching southwest Germany, and western Switzerland had a sundown alert.

The RAF overnight heavyweights, in six separate task forces, hit railway yards at Lens and Lille, France, and Courtrai and Ghent in Belgium, unidentified objectives on the French coast, and Ludwigshafen, Germany, while others laid mines in enemy waters. Fifteen bombers failed to return.

157 Vital Targets Attacked

At the same time, RAF heavy and medium bombers from Italy hit Budapest, capital of Hungary. The Budapest attack rounded out about 2000 sorties by the Allied Mediterranean Air Forces during the day and night.

When daylight came, RAF Spitfire and Typhoon fighter-bombers

How Revised Draft Policy Affects Various Classes

Here is how the new draft program shapes up, class by class:

Men 30 and over: Where they work is the main test, with those regularly enaged in essential activities to "remain in civilian life for an indefinite period," in a deferred classificaton.

Those 26 through 29: What they're doing is the test, with those who qualify as necessary men in essential activities to be deferred for the time being, probably for at least six months.

Those under 26: Slated to provide the bulk of draft calls for the next six months, all but 100,000 to 140,000 irreplaceable men employed in a few listed critical activities will be inducted.

Men already in 1-A: Draft boards were directed to reclassify out of 1-A those 26 and over who would qualify for a deferment under the new regulations.

Men of all military age groups disqualified for military service (4-F) or qualified for only limited service (1-AL): If engaged in an essential activity, they may receive a deferment.

Who will be inducted: Those not qualified for deferment under the new regulations and volunteers, delinquents, and those who leave essential agriculture without permission from their local boards.

What is essential: Activities in war production or in support of the national health, safety or interest, including the 35 activities on the War Manpower Commission's list of essential activities, and, at the option of local draft boards, locally needed activities listed by the area offices of WMC, and local activities related to utilities, food, clothing, fuel, housing, health, safety and other services or endeavors "required for the preservation and effectiveness of the life of a Nation at war."

'Necessary' Registrants 26-29 Passed Six Months

New Draft Policy Orders Most Calls To Be Filled From Under-26 Group

By Ben W. Gilbert

Announcing that he expected men under 26 to fill the bulk of military calls for six months, Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, director of Selective Service, yesterday assured me nin the 30 to 38 age group engaged in war production and war supporting activities that "they will remain in civilian life for an indefinite period," barring unexpected changes in military needs.

Those 26 through 29 who qualify as "necessary men" in essential activities "will remain in civilian life for the time being," probably six months, Hershey said, unveiling new draft regulations formally adjusting Selective Service requirements to the new age-bracket system and greatly reduced demands for men from the armed services.

Draft boards were ordered to review the status of the 2,250,000 men now in 1-A in accordance with the new rules, granting 2-A (war supporting) and 2-B (war production) deferments to those entitled to them. Approximately 600,000 of the number in 1-A are under 26.

Monthly Quotas Reduced

Hershey revealed that Army and Navy calls for the rest of the year are estimated to run from 100,000 to 150,000 a month. Earlier this year, they were as high as 250,000 a month. It was understood that, as of May 1, the Navy was only 200,000 short of its 3.6 million goal, while the Army strength was about 100,000 above strength, providing some leeway.

The tight deferment rules for men under 26 were not changed. Men under 26 cannot be deferred without the approval of State Selective Service directors. Hershey estimated that 100,000 to 140,000 out of a total under-26 pool of 1.7 millions would be deferred.

Pressed to define the status of 30 and over in essential activities more closely, Hershey stated that "indefinitely" meant six months or longer, since all deferments automatically are limited to six months. But he indicated that 30 and over would experience little difficulty getting deferments renewed unless the military situation changed.

Formal Requests Advised

Draft boards were authorized to place men 30 and over in the 2-A and 2-B deferred classes on the basis of information in their files, but Hershey advised the individual registrants and their employers to take the additional precaution of filing formal deferment requests. These requests are normally filed by employers, but may be filed by the registrant. Registrants 30 and

Japs Capture Key Railway, Trap Chinese

Whole Line Taken As Foe Makes Big Gains in Honan

Chungking (Friday), May 12 (AP). The Japanese invaders of Honan Province have won control of the entire length of the Peiping-Hankow Railway and in swift gains over a wide area, have trapped several groups of Chinese troops, the Chinese command acknowledged today.

Strong enemy forces fighting up the Peiping-Hankow Railway from the base at Sinyang joined forces at Chumatien with a column striking down the railway from Chenghsien. The forces met May 9, 21 days after the big offensive opened, a communique said.

Chinese Troops Cut Off

A map accompanying the bulletin showed several pockets of Chinese resistance behind the Japanese lines. It was indicated the defenders had little hope of fighting their way out.

The Japanese appeared to be forcing the Chinese to fight at scattered points to prevent them from massing sufficient strength to check the better-equipped invaders.

Japanese battering at Loyang on the East-West Lunghai Railway fought a fierce battle 6 miles to the southeast, and casualties on both sides were heavy.

However, the Chinese have recaptured Yingshang, in Anhwei Province, from which the Japanese had based a diversionary thrust into Honan, the communique said.

Spreading Air of Concern

There was a spreading air of concern in China. Possession of Loyang would give the Japanese a western protective screen, strengthening their hold on the Peiping-Hankow railway. This line gives them good communication and transport from their northern base down to the Yangtze River in central China.

Not since the Japanese drive on Hankow in 1938 have they made so serious a threat. About 60,000 square miles of Honan Province have passed into Japanese control.

One invader column is striking westward along the Lunghai railway in the vicinity of Yenshih, 21 miles east of Loyang, and another is 6 miles south.

While the Chinese siad the Japanese attempt to cross the Yellow

Nazi Big Guns Pound Allied Lines in Italy

Cassino and Anzio Beachhead Areas Are Heavily Shelled

Naples, May 11 (AP).—Heavy mortar and artillery assault on Allied positions in the Cassino area and an exceptionally concentrated artillery barrage against the central sector of the Allied beachhead perimeter were announced today.

The Germans sent single planes over the Allied positions in the Cassino area to strafe forward positions, but they caused no damage, a communique said.

Action was stepped up virtually along the entire Italian front yesterday after the German artillery onslaught reached a peak the night before, when about 4000 shells were aimed at the Fifth Army's positions within a half hour. At the same time, the Germans sent 15 planes to raid the beachhead port, but no damage resulted. Antiaircraft fire bagged two of the raiders.

Patrol actions also were increased. Allied raiding parties captured a number of prisoners and inflicted casualties. One party yesterday, with tank support, struck at enemy-held houses 2 miles southwest of Cisterna, and an American officer and three men captured a dozen prisoners.

No further word was reported by the Allied command on the whereabouts of Eighth Army troops which had occupied three villages in following up a German withdrawal on the Adriatic front.

Fighting on the Central Front near Monte Marrone was an Italian Corps of Liberation, which, an official announcement said, has been built up from one small motorized group "until it includes whole battalions of all the famous units of the Italian regular army."

Turkey Gets Nazi 'Kick' On Chrome Shipments

London, May 11 (AP).—Berlin radio said today that Franz von Papen, German ambassador to Turkey, had handed the Turkish government a statement on the situation created by the Turks "breach of agreement" in stopping chrome shipments to the Reich.

The broadcast did not describe the Nazi statement. Von Papen went to Berlin when Turkey, at Allied behest, halted deliveris o chrom, and has just returned to Istanbul.

Allies Set Fires at Truk, Raid Woleai

Allied Headquarters, New Guinea (Friday) May 12 (AP).—Liberator bombers from the Solomons set fires on Japan's naval base of Truk Wednesday and other bombers cratered the runway of Woleai in the western Carolines Tuesday, headquarters reported today.

These Caroline raids from the south and southwest Pacific are integrated with other attacks on those same islands by bombers from the Marshall Islands.

Today's communique also told of bombing and strafing attacks by all types of planes Wednesday at Wewak and Hansa Bay on New Guinea. Those are the sectors where Japanese garrisons trapped between Alexishafen and Altape are reported concentrating.

On the southeastern end of that trap, headquarters said today that Australians have moved near to Cape Croisilles, 16 miles north of Alexishafen. The gap between those Aussies and the American Sixth Army forces at Altape is a little over 200 miles.

Probers to Call Witnesses for U. S., Ward's

To Question Avery And Either Biddle Or Davis on Seizure

By Robert C. Albright

A special House Investigating Committee last night decided to call Government and Montgomery Ward & Co. witnesses to testify publicy on Federal seizure of the company's Chicago plants, and the dispute leading up to the seizure.

House Majority Whip Robert Ramspeck (D., Ga.), chairman, said either War Labor Board Chairman William H. Davis or Attorney General Francis Biddle will appear first for the Government. Ward Board Chairman Sewell Avery and other officials will be called later.

Party-Line Division

The seven-man House investigating committee at its first meeting divided roughly along party lines on proposals to first explore throughly the background of the case before taking up the actual seizure, it was learned. A decision on this point was postponed.

But at the committee's next meeting, four Democratic members of the group are expected to vote to call War Labor Board Chairman Davis as the first witness to testify on the dispute leading up to the seizure.

The committee's three-man Republican minority is understood to favor putting Attorney General Biddle on the stand as the first witness and proceeding directly to an examination of the Government's occupation of the plant and eviction of Avery.

Legality Check Expected

In any event, the House group was expected to examine the legality of the Government's action, despite elimination of the bill's authorization for a study of validity by the House Rules Committee.

Senate Judiciary Chairman Pat McCarran (D., Nev.), conducting the Senate's parallel investigation, had already indicated his committee will pass on the legality of the seizure.

Ramspeck said: "I don't see how we can avoid going into that question."

Earlier both Ramspeck and Mc-

Dewey Voices His Opposition To Poll Taxes

But Statement Fails To Satisfy Negro Leader Who Solicited It

By the Associated Press

Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York voiced his opposition to poll taxes yesterday, but Walter White, secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, promptly declared the Republican Governor's statement "is not enough."

Replying to a telegram from White, who asked Dewey to help break a threatened Senate filibuster against a lon-pending anti-poll-tax bill, the New York Governor said in part:

"I have always fought against the poll tax and every other device to deprive free people of their votes."

White quickly telegraphed in reply:

"To say that one is against the poll tax but refrain from advocating specific steps to abolish it is not enough."

Referred to "Strategic Position"

White, in asking Dewey's aid, had spoken of the Governor's "strategic position" in Republican Party affairs, an obvious reference to the fact that the New Yorker has a long lead in pledged delegates for the GOP presidential nomination. In his reply to Dewey's wire, White said the statement "leaves unanswered the two most important questions connected with the issue:

"Do you favor the Federal bill now before the Senate to abolish the poll tax?"

"Do you favor cloture?"

He asked Dewey to "urge upon the 23 Republican Senators who virtually hold the fate of the bill in their hands that they vote next Monday for cloture."

Meanwhile, 29 members — 17 Democrats, 11 Republicans and

War Manpower Planning Held Peacetime Job

By Mary Spargo

A blueprint for total mobilization of manpower as well as industrial resources in case of war should be made during peace, Assistant Navy Secretary Ralph A. Bard declared yesterday.

Bard told the special House committee on postwar military policy that consolidation of the Army and Navy under a single Department of War might result in a very slight economy in civilian manpower of the two departments.

The greatest waste in resources, he asserted, rises from the fact "that labor, the most important factor of production, cannot be allocated to those economic areas where it is most needed for the conduct of war."

Vandegrift Gives Warning

Lieut. Gen. A. A. Vandegrift, Marine commandant, reiterated Navy warnings that any proposals for consolidation of the armed services be studied with the greatest care.

"During over 168 years," Vandegrift said, "our corps has built up an esprit de corps, based on its splendid traditions as a combat service, which makes the United States Marine unexcelled as a fighting man anywhere in the world.

"We can envision no gain to our country's readiness for war in any reorganization which would discard a tradition and an esprit as old as our Nation, and which have become inspiring parts of the heritage of our people."

The hero of Guadalcanal was immediately reassured by members of the committee that in the consideration of reorganization there had never been any proposal to destroy the identity of the Marine Corps.

Meanwhile, The Washington Post learned the committee has come to a definite decision that the hearings

Sedition Trial Recesses, Jury Still Lacking

Defense Lawyer Fined For Facetious Remark; Guild Secretary Scored

By James E. Chinn

Amid an uproar, America's big on-again-off-again sedition trial came to the end of its fourth week yesterday still without a permanently seated jury.

Developments of the day were these:

1. Ira Chase Koehne, counsel for 4 of the 29 defendants, aroused the ire of Chief Justice Edward C. Eicher with a facetious remark directed at 3 of the prospective jurors and was fined $50.

2. The battery of 20 defense lawyers demanded that Martin Popper, secretary of the National Lawyers Guild be cited for contempt for distributing a press release to reporters covering the mass trial which denounced the court room conduct of the attorneys and lauded the punishment of one of them—the very active James J. Laughlin—for tactics,

Distillery Offers Plan

25 Per Cent of D. C. Dealers Will Receive More Whisky

Twenty-five per cent of Washington retail whisky dealers will have an estimated 150,000 additional cases of whisky, over and above their current quotas, for sale during the next two or three months, it was revealed here yesterday.

The increase will result from dealers taking advantages of the offer of the American Distilling Co., Inc., to release its supplies of whisky to purchasers of its securities.

Dealers here are privileged to have the whisky bottled for them by the American Distilling Co. This is sold under the trade name of "Special Privilege." Or if they wish they may make a deal to obtain some of the brands they customarily sell. Under the latter arrangement the local dealer accepts warehouse receipts from the American Distilling Co. These receipts are then sold to the firm handling the brand the dealer customarily sells.

The bottler of his favorite brand then sells the dealer a quantity of whisky commensurate with the amount represented in the warehouse receipts, and uses that stored in the warehouse to replenish his own depleted stocks as necessary.

As the result of this arrangement it is expected there will be an upsurge in the flow of such brands as Calvert, Seagrams and Kinsey as well as "Special Privilege" into the District within a week or two.

While sanctioning the arrangement as a whole, the ABC Board

Aim at Bridgehead

Nazis Launch Strong Assault On Lower Dnestr River Front

London, May 11 (AP).—The Germans launched a strong assault today against the Soviet bridgehead northwest of Tiraspol on the long-quiet lower Dnestr River front in Bessarabia, both Moscow and Berlin announced, but the Russians said the attack was repulsed with heavy Nazi losses while the German command claimed the Soviet holdings were wiped out, with 500 Russians captured.

The Russians on April 12 took Tiraspol, on the east bank of the Dnestr and 65 miles northeast of Odessa, and immediately thereafter established their bridgehead on the west bank. Its extent never has been indicated, but the front there has been comparatively quiet more than three weeks.

The German communique also asserted German and Romanian forces still were hanging onto the extreme tip of the peninsula west of Sevastopol, on the Crimea.

The Russians announced two days ago that Sevastopol had been captured. Yesterday's Soviet communique told of the sinking of two 4000-ton trnasports hauling enemy survivors from the devastated port.

Moscow dispatches reported tremendous damage in Sevastopol, with the center of the Black Sea port "destroyed or ruined."

20,000 Japs Killed In Burma and India

Kandy, Celon, May 11 (AP).—At least 20.000 Japanese have been killed in Burma and northeastern India in the last 3½ months, it was estimated at headquarters today as Allied ground troops advanced in most sectors under powerful air support.

An official estimate placed the number of enemy dead at 15,000 around Imphal and Kohima in In, dia, on the Arakan front in woler Burma and in operations by Allied airborne forces in central Burma. This figure did not include more than 5000 Japanese killed by Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell's troops in northern Burma up to March 29.

There has been no estimate of Allied casualties in the effort to throw the Japanese out of India and to cut a supply road across northern Burma to China, but they are believed to have been much lighter than those suffered by the enemy.

Like Verdun, Says Tokio

In the fierce fighting around Imphal alone, today's communique said, the Japanese have lost 6100 killed, and another 2000 enemy troops have ben cut down by the British and Indian defenders of Kohima, 60 miles to the north. Allied bombers and dive-bimbers are laying down a murderous barrage on Japanese positions in both areas.

(A Tokyo broadcast told of haid-to-hand fighting on the approaches to Imphal and declared that "the scale of these fierce battles is comparable to the battle of Verdun in the last World War.")

Dispatches continued to indicate the Japanese were making their main effort in the Palel area, some 28 miles south of Imphal, though they are closer to the big Allied base at other points. Allied forces were reported to have inflicted casualties on superior enemy units both northeast and southeast of Palel, and to have miproved their positions on the outskirts of Kohima, the communique said.

Biggest Air Blow

The air forces disclosed that American and British bombers unloaded nearly 200 tons of explosives in an attack last Monday and Tuesday on Japanese strongpoints just north of Palel. It was the largest Allied striking force yet sent against a sngle target in this area.

Stilwell's forces in northern Burma also were given powerful support by American fighters, fighter-bombers and bombers as they captured two more villages approximately 10 mles north of Kamaing, occupied two weeks ago.

One of Stilwell's advance columns, supported by American-manned medium tanks, made a six-hour raid into enemy territory and silenced heavy enemy antitank fire before retiring without casualties.

Bong Trains As Gunnery Instructor

By James F. King

Maj. Richard I. Bong, the first American fighter pilot to break Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker's World War I record of 28 enemy aircraft destroyed in aerial combat, is back from the southwest Pacific with his air fighting days at an end, for the present at least.

He told a Petnagon press conferenee yesterday that he has been brought back to learn more about aerial gunnery so he can return to the fighting front and teach other men to shoot down Jap planes.

The man who destroyed 27 Japanese planes and is credited with 8 more "probables" indicated he is willing to learn all he can about gunnery, but apparently he doesn't like the idea of missing any fights.

No Combat Flying

"I'll still fly, as I understand it, but I won't get any combat flying," he said, adding that he did not think much of the idea. Asked why in his opinion he had been ordered to stop combat flying, he replied: "I don't know. Guess they didn't want me to get killed."

As for gunnery, Bong said he is a very poor shot.

"If I could shoot like Major George Welch," he said, referring to another Army fighter pilot who has returned from the Pacific battle zones, "I'd have 75 planes. He's been in four or five scraps and got 16. I've been in 25 and got 27."

Weak on Deflection

Bong said his weakness, and one of the things he will practice, is "deflection shooting." "The only way I can hit them," he said, "is to get right up on them and catch them dead ahead—or with a deflection of not more than 10 degrees." Real shooting, according to Bong, requires that the Jap planes be shot down as they pass at an angle. This version of leading the target requires instantaneous calculation of factors characteristic of aerial warfare in which the gunner and his taget are moving at speeds of between 500 and 700 miles an hour.

POLL

Senator La Follette (Prog., Wis.—signed a debate-limiting cloture petition calling for a vote Monday on whether to confine further debate to one hour per senator.

Unless proponents of a House-approved bill outlawing collection of the poll tax as a voting requirement in Federal elections can muster the two-thirds majority necessary to limit debate there is no possibility of halting a southern Democratic filibuster to prevent a vote on the measure itself.

While Dewey's telegram was a flat commitment for elimination of the levy, he made no reference to White's request that he use his "strategic position" in an effort to persuade Republican Senators to vote for cloture.

White had asserted that 23 Republican members either refused to agree to ovte for debate limitation or declined to say how they will vote in Monday's test.

Meantime, Senators McKellar (D., Tenn.) and Bankhead (D., Ala.) carried on Senate debate against the antipoll-tax measure.

McKellar said Jennings Perry, editor of the Nashville Tennessean and a leading supporter of the bill, is a "Communist editor of a Communist newspaper run by a Communist from Texas." Silliman Evans is publisher of the newspaper. Earlier, Perry issued a statement asserting McKellar "never in his life had to face a free electorate."

over need not meet the more stringent "necessary man" test applied to those in the 26 through 29 group.

Issuance of the regulations automatically superseded Hershey's April 8 order to draft boards not to induct registrants 26 and over in essential activities until further notice.

From now on draft icalls wil be made up of the folowing groups: Men under 26; men 26 through 29 who fail to qualify as necessary men in essential activities; men 30 through 37 who are not engaged n essential activities; volunteers, delinquents and farmers who leave essential agriculture wthout the approval of their draft boards.

In meeting calls, local boards were told to call men in the following order: volunteers, nonfathers and fathers. Dependency carries no weight, except in hardship cases or where there is a choice between two men to meet a call, Hershey said.

The regulations defined essential activities as "activities in war production and in support of the national health, safety or interest." Specifically cited as a guide to draft boards was the War Manpower Commission's list of 35 essential activities, but the boards were expressly authorized to consider other activities not on the list which might be important locally.

now being held are only to build up a record and a background for a postwar study. Any idea that legislation might be forthcoming before the end of the war has been discarded.

Air-Clearing Conference

The Navy, it was learned, had approved of the postwar study, but was disturbed when the committee appeared to be considerably impressed by suggestions of Lieut. Gen. Brehon Somervell and other Army spokesmen that the consolidation might be made during the war.

Feeling that an Army-Navy battle over the issue would be most unwise, Secretary of War Stimson called a conference in his office of Army and Navy chiefs and several senior members of the House committee.

The conference "cleared the air," according to committee members, and resulted in the House group adopting a definite policy of delaying any decision or recommendation until after the war.

This reassured the Navy, which had feared the House group was being "steamrollered" into a decision, and the Joint Chiefs of Staff recommended that both services make thorough studies for postwar purposes.

Tentative Jury Selected

3. A tentative ury of nine men and three women was finally selected, but its makeup may yet undergo many changes if the Government and the defense decide to exercise their seven remaining peremptory challenges each.

4. Justice Ficher flatly denied an appeal of Edward James Smythe for a reduction in his $10,000 bond to a size that would permit his release from the District Jail where he has been housed since FBI agents interrupted his lark in the Adirondacks.

With unrestrained anger, Justice Eicher cracked down on Attorney Koehne and by so doing showed that he did not intend to relent in his recently adopted policy of enforcing courtroom etiquette. Koehne is the third member of the defense staff to feel the sting of a contempt citation.

The lawyer's remark that provoked the $50 fine, came during the serious business of impaneling the jury. The court had apportioned 10 peremptory challenges among the 29 defendants.

Facetious Remark

One prospective juror already had been removed from the box on a defense challenge when Koehne arose.

"Your honor," he said, "I peremptorally challenge a fractional part of 10-29th's comprising the upper portions of the anatomy of proposed jurors four, six and nine."

Gavel in hand and in action, Justice Eicher immediately ordered the entire venire panel out of the court room, and when peace and tranquility was restored, stared at the lawyer and declared:

"Mr. Koehne, the court finds you $50 for contempt for wilfully and deliberately making that statement."

"I appeal forthwith," retorted Koehne.

The court told him to go ahead and appeal, but to appear Monday when the trial is resumed, with $50 in his pockets.

Laughlin Leads Attack

The first attack on Popper was made by Attorney Laughlin when he called to the attention of Justice Jennings Bailey who found him guilty of contempt the statement issued by the secretary of the Lawyers Guild. He pointed out the statement was circulated two or three mnutes after Justce Bailey announced his decision.

Later, P. Bateman Ennis, attorney for Gerhard Wilhelm Kunze, former head of the German American Bund, apepaled to Justice Eicher in open court to issue a rule for Popper to show cause why he should not be cited for contempt. Other defense counsel mmediately chorused their approval of such action.

"The court should be alert to protect defendants and counsel," shouted Laughlin, who a few minutes before had filed formal notice of his appeal from Justice Bailey's decision which found him guilty of contempt.

"It's a slap at al the attorneys in this case," interposed Ethelbert B. Frey, counsel for Robert E. Edmondson.

"It's an unjustified and unwarranted attack on defense counsel," agreed Attorney Frank H. Meyers. "It only adds to the confusion."

Eicher Listens Calmly

Justice Eicher listened calmly to the complaints and explained it was the first information he had on the "subject," and it would be given "due consideration."

But when Chief Federal Prosecutor O. John Rogge arose and announced his stern disapproval of the issuance of statements about anyone conected with the sedition case, Justice Eicher ordered that a copy of the guild statement be made a part of the record. He also directed that a copy of that portion of the official transcript dealing with the discussion relative to the statement be referred to Justice Bailey for "consideration."

Justice Bailey intimated he may decide sometime today whether to take judicial notice of the flareup over the guild statement.

Meanwhile, Justice Eicher continued with the tiring process of filling the jury box. As soon as all 12 seats were occupied with men and women who survived the preliminary examinations the defense lawyers began shelling them with peremptory challenges. When court adjourned for the weekend, the defense attorneys had used three of their alloted 10 challenges, each of which caused a replacement in the box. The Government waved the first three of its challenges.

Allies' 'G-5' Set to Begin Ruling Reich

By Pugh Moore

Somewhere in Britain, May 11 (AP).—Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower unveiled today an organization all set to march into Germany beside the conquering troops and rule villages, cities and the whole Reich with a military iron hand.

Correspondents were given a look at the training center of these military rulers, while the Germans continued their endless guessing of when and where the Allied commander would strike.

The organization is known as the G-5 (civil affairs) section of Eisenhower's supreme headquarters, and it will function in Germany just as AMG does in Italy.

Besides Germany, the civil affairs section is ready to operate temporarily in France, Holland and other occupied countries of western Europe, but not as a military government.

Headed by Canadian

The top officer is Lieut. Gen. A. E. Grassett, Canadian-born member of the Royal Engineers.

The ranking American is Brig. Gen. Aulius C. Holmes, a Kansan who in peace was a diplomate and businessman, and who accompanied Lieut. Gen. Mark Clark on his daring preinvasion submarine trip to North Africa. Later he was Eisenhower's chief of the military government section.

Chief of operations is Brig. Gen. Frank J. McSherry, Washsington, D. C., who was the first United States officer to enter Naples.

Germany, which probably will include Austria, will present more of a problem because the military government must remain in control until some sort of postwar commision takes over.

In the interim, it will be plagued with all the difficulties common to liberated countries, plus the difficulty of handling anti-Nazis in internment camps clamoring to return home, a youth movement schooled in Nazi doctrine which is expected to go underground, a hostile population, and sabotage.

British and American training is under Col. H. Dillard, former assistant dean of the University of Virginia Law School, chief training officer. Head of the training center is Col. H. Pendleton, Austin, Tex. Other Allied nations have training establishments.

Sees Synchronized Blows

Across the Channel, Nazi Propaganda Minister Goebbels was quoted by the Berlin radio as telling a German tank grenadier division just returned from the Russian front that it was "politically" superior because it knew "exactly what this fight of ideologies is about."

While the Nazi propaganda outlets continued to hum with tense phrases about the expected invasion, the Moscow radio reported a remark by Soviet Foreign Commissar Vyacheslav Molotov that the Allies would soon hit Germany with synchronized blows from east and west.

SEtate OPA Seeks 1200 Volunteers To Watch Stores

Baltimore, May 11 (AP).—The State Office of Pric eAdministration opene da recruiting campaign today, seeking 1200 volunteers to watch stores for price ceiling violations.

M. Shakman Katz, district price executive, said the volunteers were expected to include housewives, war workers and white collar workers and would be classified as associates of the price panels operating under the war price and rationing boards.

The recruits will be asked to assume responsibility for making regular reports of all stores visited in designated areas, whether or not violations of price ceilings are involved.

"We feel that a volunteer associate of a price panel can help a storekeeper and we also feel that, when he knows that a person informed of all the regulations is apt to drop in on him, the storekeeper will be more aware of his obligations," Katz said.

WARD

Carran had indicated their intention of proceeding with their independent inquiries despite the Government's restoration of the plant to the company.

Still Undecided

Following a week in which the Government had moved out of the plant, a majority of the employes had voted for a CIO union bargaining agent, and a Chicago Federal judge had declined to rule on the Government's injunction suit against interference by Ward officials, the legality of the seizure remained undecided.

Yesterday in Chicago the Government abandoned prosecution of Paul D. Sowell, assistant to the operating manager of the company, on a charge of misdemeanor in removing a Government poster from a bulletin board during Federal operation of the plant."

Arrest Ended Threat

Assistant Prosecutor William Connor told United States Commissioner Edwin K. Walker that Sowell's arrest after tearing down the poster "ended the threat of interference with Government property."

Connor said: "The Government's possession now has bene terminated. While there was a violation of a Federal statute the main controversy is closed and in my judgment and in the judgment of Mr. Woll (United States District Attorney) the ends of justice do not require that this ma nbe further prosecuted."

RAIDS

and British Mitchells and Bostons went out in strength against a variety of communications targets in northern France and hit Douai for the third time since the rail-destroying offensive began.

American Maruders and A-20 Havocs made both morning and afternoon raids, for the fifth consecutive day, hitting the Beaumont-le-Roger and Cormeilles-en Vexin airfields near Paris and unnamed objectives on the coast. Thunderbolts escorted them.

Three ofrmations of American Liberators totaling 750 planes, with possibly 500 fighter escorts, did a precision daylight job on three undisclosed railway targets. Since the full-scale assault on the rail network in German-held Western Europe began on March 2, at least 157 attacks have been made on at least 64 vital targets. Some key junctions have been hit four and five times.

Friedrichshafen Hard Hit

Bern, Switzerland, May 11 (AP).—A dispatch to the Journal de Geneve from the German town of Singen today quoted eyewitnesses as saying the Allied night air assault of April 27 on Friedrichshafen had caused more than 4000 casualties in that industrial city's suburbs.

Welders Doing Other Work Given Pay Cut

Cleveland, May 11 (AP).—Workers who are forced into lower-paid jobs when the shifting needs of war production affect their plants cannot continue to draw their former wage rate, the regional War Labor Board ruled today.

The board's decision involved a request of the CIO United Auto Workers that 32 welders at the Twin Coach Co., Kent, Ohio, be paid welders' rates despite the fact that the company had exhausted its welding contracts and the men were working at other jobs.

The union contended the company had promised "duration jobs" to the welders and asked that the welding rate of $1.25 an hour be continued while the men were performing other work rated at $1.15 an hour. The board ruled that the issue of any company promise did not constitute a wage stabilization question, but that payment of the higher rate while the men were not working as welders violated wage stabilization policies.

Also denied was the union's request that the employes be reimbursed for time and expense involved in their original training as welders. However, the WLB directed the company to increase the hourly wage rates of 40 assistant foremen by 1½ cents to eliminate intraplant inequities and to place them on a scale 10 per cent above the highest-rated employes they supervise.

Ship Guards Get Increase

By the Associated Press

The War Labor Board Shipbuilding Commission yesterday granted a $5.10 weekly pay increase to experienced guards at the Atlantic and Simpson yards of the Bethlehem Steel Co., East Boston, Mass., and authorized them to cross picket lines in the event of strikes.

The latter provision, together with an agreement that the guards themselves should not participate in a strike of work stoppage because of the special nature of their work, was agreed to by the Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers, CIO.

The commission said the company agreed, on the other hand, not to lock out the guard department employes, and not to use the guards "in any way as strikebreaker;" but solely in the protection of life and property and maintenance of law and order.

Approximately 130 guards are covered by the order. A maintenance of membership cluase, identical with that covering production workers, was granted.

Blockbuster's Blind Inventor Confers Here

By International News Service

Air Commander Patrick Huskinson, 47-year-old blind hero of the Royal Air Force, who invented the most lethal weapon of World War II—the 12,000-pound blockbuster—is in Washington participating in Allied discussions on armament design and development.

Robbed of his sight by the German blitz of 1941, Huskinson has figured in most of the Allied air force councils which have sped thousands of bomb-laden planes over German targets with his huge missiles of death.

The "invincible one-man air armada, as Huskinson has been called by his colleagues, is conferring with high air force officials here on the stepped-up air assault on the Reich.

Perfected Aerial Bombs

Huskinson not only designed and supervised production of the blockbusters, but also perfected the smaller 8000-pound and 4000-pound aerial bombs now raining down on Germany.

As a fighter pilot in the last war, Huskinson shot down 14 German planes and wears many British decorations. He joined the Royal Air Force in 1915.

For two years—from 1939 to 1941—Huskinson was employed as director of armaments development in the British Ministry of Aircraft Production.

Lost His Sight in '41

He lost his sight as a result of shock and glass fragments during the blitz of April 16, 1941, while living at Knightsbridge, London. But it may be restored while he is in America.

Several distinguished American eye surgeons have offered their services.

During a visit last year he consulted Dr. Benjamin Rones of Washington ,and Dr. Townley Patton of New York, and part of his time during this visit will be spent in further consultations.

Huskinson is accompanied by his wife, who acts as his secretary.

Japs Still Making 'Australian Coin,' Admiral Reports

San Francisco, May 11 (AP).—Rear Admiral Daniel E. Barbey, who commanded the amphibious strike against Hollandia, Dutch New Guinea, said here today that although the Japanese "are on the run and are being pushed back, they are still making money to be used when Australia is taken."

Apparently, the admiral asserted, the people in Japan think their reverses are only temporary. The admiral displayed at his press conference a handful of Japanese government one shilling notes which he said were found when he walked into Japanese headquarters at Hollandia.

"It was almost like walking into a mint," he said. "The money was bound in bales."

31% Increase Noted in Md. Farm Prices

College Park, Md., May 11 (AP).—Prices of Maryland farm land have increased since 1941 to a point higher than in any of the other North and Middle Atlantic States and greater than the national average.

The Maryland Agriculture War Board reported today that farm prices in the State were now 136 per cent of the 1910-14 normal—an increase of 10 per cent from 1942 and of 31 per cent from 1941. The index climbed to 166 in 1920 and reached its low of 90 in 1933.

Sales Also Increase

Sales of farms were 50 per cent greater in 1943 than in 1942, and 71 per cent of the 1943 sales were made to active farmers, a survey made by the U. S. Department of Agriculture's Bureau of Agricultural Economics showed.

The war board also said that more than 17 per cent of the farm operators in Maryland were 65 years of age or older.

Meanwhile Edward M. Davis, State soil conservationist, said today that contour plowing of field crops is increasing yields of Maryland war crops 20 per cent.

On the Eastern Shore the yield of corn was increased from 35 bushels per acre to 42 bushels by planting on the contour fields previously plowed without regard to the slope. Where plowing and planting are on the contour each furrow acts as a dam to store up moisture. Where plowing is up and down the slope of the field each furrow acts as a drainage ditch carrying moisture and top soil from the field, Davis stated.

Corn Yield Boosted

Tests made in northeastern and western Maryland with corn, increased the yield from 62 bushels per acre to 74.8 bushels in one soil conservation district and from 41 bushels to 64 bushels per acre in another.

Wheat yields were increased an average of 8 per cent. One farmer increased his tomato yield 120 per cent and his corn silage 20 per cent through contour plowing.

Dentist Sees Wiping Out Of Toothache

Richmond, Va., May 11 (AP).—"Freedom from toothache" will be dentistry's contribution to the post-war world, predicted Dr. Leo A. Pusey, Richmond dentist, in a paper read before the Virginia Academy of Science's annual meeting here yesterday.

Dr. Pusey believes there are two factors in the prevention of dental caries (decay). One is called by him "elemental-vitamin-amino-radiosol sufficiency in the system," and the other "an accurate acid-alkaline balance in the saliva." Both, Dr. Pusey said, are influenced by diet.

"Dentally, an adequate diet is one that contains all of the elements which correspond with the chemical analysis of tooth structure, together with all of the vitamins, amides and a 'radiosolar' property needed to influence the others to biological activity."

Dr. Pusey calls this property "radiosol."

Because radiosol is native only in raw food, raw food should always be eaten with cooked foods, Dr. Pusey believes. Cooked foods are biologically "dead foods" while fresh, raw food is biologically "living food," promoting easy digestion of cooked food, Dr. Pusey said.

Baltimore, May 11 (AP).—Dr. Rorace E. Flack announced today that the Maryland legislatice council will meet May 17 and 18 to consider recommended legislation expected to be submitted by eight State agencies.

Stat etax commission, State Forester Joseph F. Kaylor; the State roads commission, Miss Adele Frantz, superintendent of St. Mary's Female Seminary; Tidewater Fisheries Commission, State Planning Commission, State Comptroller J. Millard Tawes, and Judge Allan Rhynhart of Baltimore Peoples Court.

Baltimore Night Clubs Hard Hit by New Tax

Baltimore, May 11 (AP).—During the last two weeks, 65 Baltimore night club workers have found themselves jobless and night clubs have noted a marked drop in business as a result of the new 30 per cent Federal tax, club operators reported today.

A total of 125 local entertainers have been thrown out of work since the new tax became effective as of April.

A spokesman for a performers' union predicted that "in 60 days there won't be any night club business."

Md. Income Tax Total Reaches $3,953,471

Annapolis, Md., May 11 (AP).—Marylanders had paid $3,953,471 in State income tax on 1943 income through May 9, State Comptroller J. Millard Tawes reportes.

Tawes said yesterday the sum represented 127,139 tax returns and that resident income contributed $2,833,645 and corporation income taxes, $1,052,933.

Non-resident income taxes totalled $13,960 for 594 returns and taxes withheld by employers amounted to $21,548.

W. H. Stauffer Quits as State Welfare Head

Richmond, Va., May 11 (AP).—Dr. William H. Stauffer, for the last six years State Commissioner of Public Welfare, offered his resignation today to Governor Darden to accept a position not yet announced but described as being of great importance.

The resignation is effective July 1 or earlier.

Dr. Stauffer was appointed by Governor Price in May, 1938, as Public Welfare Commissioner to succeed Arthur W. James, who had held the office since May, 1932. Prior to going to the welfare department, Dr. Stauffer server as economist for the state tax department and director of research and statistics for the Unemployment Compensation Commission.

Governor Darden, in announcing the resignation, said Dr. Stauffer would go to a "post of great importance, and one which I think warrants the step he has taken." The governor said he was not at liberty to divulge the nature of this new post. Dr. Stauffer himself said he could not discuss his plans at present.

"It is with great regret that I see him go," the governor said. "He is an able department head and he has been a great assistance to me"

Dr. Stauffer, 47, a native of Pittsburgh and a graduate of the University of Virginia, took over the administration of the welfare department just prior to the start of the old age assistance program provided for in the general Public Assistance Act passed by the 1938 General Assembly.

OPA Cracks Down On Va. Gas Dealer

Waynesboro, May 11 (Spl.).—Judge Daniel L. Bell, regional hearing officer for the Office of Price Administration, from Atlanta, Ga., has issued an order denying Paul P. Whiting, trading as the White Service Co. in Waynesboro, the right to sell gasoline for "so long as gasoline may be rationed."

The penalty was imposed after Whiting admitted purchase of counterfeit ration coupons and use of these coupons to secure gasoline from his distributor. He was also charged with selling gasoline at higher than ceiling prices without obtaining proper coupons from the customers.

PSC Probes Serviceman's Bus Charges

Baltimore, May 11 (AP).—The Public Service Commission said today it was investigating charges brought by an Aberdeen soldier that drivers for a major bus line discriminate against men in uniform and treat them "like so many cattle."

The PSC said the charges were contained in a letter to the Interstate Commerce Commission from a private in the Ordnance Department. The letter was turned over to the PSC by the ICC because it concerned transportation wholly within Maryland.

The soldier said he had been refused transportation on a bus although he had bought a ticket and was neither "intoxicated or disorderly."

Refused Passage

He said he tried to board in Baltimore a New York-bound bus which was scheduled to make a stop at Aberdeen. The driver told him he was not stopping at Aberdeen, the soldier continued, and told him to take another bus then in the station.

The latter vehicle he found to be full, the soldier said, and when he returned to the other bus he was informed by the driver, "I told you I would not take you and I meant it." At the same time, he charged, an officer and his wife were allowed to get aboard.

Military police who investigated the affair at the dispatcher's office informed him, the soldier said, that it was his own fault for arguing with the driver.

Other Cases Claimed

"This is not the only case of ill-treatment at the hands of the bus drivers of that line," the soldier said.

"Go down to the terminal yourself and question a line of soldiers there. They are treated not like people who have paid their fare and are legally entitled to service, but like so many cattle who the company is doing a favor to in transporting them."

PSC Executive Secretary Frank Harper reported a copy of the letter had been sent to the bus line for explanation.

Robertson to Seek Committeeman Post

Baltimore, May 11 (AP).—Supporters of Paul Robertson, Republican committee chairman for Baltimore City who was defeated in the recent Senatorial primary, asserted today Robertson is a candidate for National committeeman.

Spokesmen who said they represented Robertson declared that he felt his showing against Blanchard Randall, Baltimore banker and the Republican Senatorial nominee, entitle dhi mto the post.

At the same time, Robertson's friends said any effort by State Chairman Galen L. Tait and Mayor Theodore R. McKeldin of Baltimore tot choose the committeeman would only widen the split in the State Republican party.

Ruling Sought On Freezing of Literary Fund

Richmond, Va., May 11 (AP).—Governor Darden has asked Attorne yGeneral A. P. Staples for a ruling on the wording of the constitutional amendment to freeze the State's literary fund.

The amendment, already approved twice by successive Geenral Assemblies, is to be submitted to a referendum at the general election this fall, and the Governor said he believes the intent should be clearly established.

However, it was cited that the attorney general's ruling would not be final, and that there might be a further move to ask the Supreme Court to rule definitely on the subject before it is submitted.

The literary fund, dating to 1810, is one set up with monies collected from fines and from property escheated to the Commonwealth. It is provided that the money shall be kept intact, the principle to be used for making loans to localities for school purposes and the income to be used for educational purposes. The expressed intention of the General Assembly was to provide that, so long as the fund was not less than 10 million dollars, accurals as well as in interest might be used for school purposes, including monies for financing the teacher retirement act. The fund now amounts to more than 11 million dollars.

The amendment is so worded that some now believe a broad interpertation of the language might allow a diversion of the money for educational purposes, and it is to clarify this before the amendment is finally submitted to a referendum that the Governor has asked the attorney general's opinion.

Last-Ditch Plea Filed For Doomed Harrison

Richmond, Va., May 11 (AP).—Counsel for Walter Paul Harrison, condemned to die May 26 on conviction that he killed his wife, filed a petition for a writ of error with the Virginia Supreme Court o fApeals today.

Describing Harrison's trial as one involving nothing but circumstantial evidence, his counsel contended that "this case is a perfect example of what might be expected in cases where no evidence is submitted upon whic ha verdict of guilty can be expected from a jury, and the resort to conjecture, interference, and appeal to passion are the principal instrumentalities upon which an innocent person may be condemned to die."

O'Conor Joins in Opposition To Span Bypassing Annapolis

Annapolis, Md., May 11 (AP).—Governor O'Conor today voiced strong opposition to any proposal which would effect a bypass of the city of Annapolis as a result of the elimination of the present Severn River bridge.

Referring to a report that the State roads commission has been asked by the Federal Roads Administration to survey a tentative route for a four-lane bridge across the Severn, skirting the State Capital and joining the Annapolis-Washington highway several miles south of the city, the Governor stated:

"Road facilities must be available to enable citizens and visitors to come to the seat of the State government, not to keep them away from it.

"It cannot be forgotten that Annapolis is the capital of Maryland and that as such, it is the center of governmental activities of the State."

O'Conor also explained that Naval Academy interests must be considered and "improved highways into Annapolis must be maintained."

"It has been our plan to have the triangle of Baltimore, Annapolis and Washington completed by modern highways and it would be a radical departure to eliminate the State Capital from the improved roadway program," the Governor concluded.

O'Conor said he felt sure a satisfactory arrangement could be worked out without bypassing the city of Annapolis, adding that the present bridge was built some 20 years ago to allow for additional construction which might convert it into a four-lane span.

Meat Shortage Called Acute In Annapolis

Annapolis, Md., May 11 (AP).—Restaurant owners and meat dealers in the State capital asserted today that "the shortage of meats is more serious today than during the worst periods of rationing by the Office of Price Administration" now that point values have been practically eliminated by the OPA.

In an Associated Press survey of this city, retail meat interests and restaurateurs declared that the civilian drain on the available meat supply as a result of the lifting of rationing from most meats last week, "has in many types of meat, cut our stocks lower than ever before in this war."

One owner of a large restaurant stated that he was only able to get one-fifth the number of steaks he had previously been able to obtain and aside from fresh ham and a small quantity of pork, his meat supplies were "nearly nonexistent and have been for the past few days."

Meat store operators attributed the shortage in part to the greatly increased buying by consumers since the OPA announced the lifting of the meat rationing ban.

Most of those interviewed added that "with all the problems of rationing, steady meat supplies were at least assured us by the OPA point system" but the elimination of this system has caused "confusion in the purchasing of good quality meats."

Bumper Year Seen For Fruit Growers

Hagerstown, Md., May 11 (AP).—Washington County fruit growers have predicted an 82,000-bushel peach crop and an apple crop totaling about 705,000 bushels this year, County Agent Mark Miller reported today.

Miller said that barring unforseen trouble later in the summer, this season should be another "clean-up year" for fruit growers. He valued the prospective fruit crop, based on last year's prices, at nearly $2,500,000.

Consolidation Of Va. Warden Areas Urged

Richmond, Va., May 11 (AP).—A major change in the administrative organization set up of the State Game Department was proposed today by T. E. Clarke, executive director of the State Game Commission, who recommended to the commission that the present four supervising warden districts be consolidated into three.

The subject arose through the death last Sunday of W. C. Rives, 72-year-old supervising warden in the southern area.

Conferences were held earlier this week to determine if the four districts could be consolidated without loss of efficiency, in line with the commission's established policy of consolidation during the war. Clarke said that 10 counties would have to be added to the northern district under supervising Warden Webb Midyette, five of which had been traveled over previously by Midyette in reaching other counties under his supervision.

Under the revised plan of administration, Jon West would take over counties in the southside and part of the Tidewater District, Wheeler Kesterson would direct game enforcement activities in southwestern Virginia and the lower Shenandoah Valley, and Midyette would continue in the northern district and a part of the Tidewater.

Record Season Is Anticipated By Md. Resorts

Baltimore, May 11 (AP).—Mountain and seaside resorts in Maryland expect a record season this year, with reservations reported already pouring into hotels and vacation homes from Pennsylvania, Virginia, West Virginia, Ohio and the District of Columbia as well as this State.

Ocean City authorities believe the season to open during the Memorial Day weekend will be the most prosperous in the history of that resort. One real estate agent there already has rented 100 apartments and cottages while another has tenants for the entire season for all but 64 of his apartments.

Meanwhile, Eastern Shore fishing guides looked forward to a good season. Rock, mackerel and hardheads have been biting lately and many fishing enthusiasts from Maryland, New Jersey, Delaware, the District of Columbia and points as far west as Cincinnati and Pittsburgh have been arriving for the sport.

Various bay points, including Claiborne, Betterton, Tolchester and Cambridge, are also making preparations to accommodate a record number of vacationers this summer.

Blue Ridge Summit and Mountain Lake Park are among the mountain spots expecting to cater to large throngs throughout the coming warm months.

Auction Date Set For 'Swannanoa,' Va. Showplace

Richmond, Va., May 11 (AP).—"Swannanoa," the Blue Ridge mountain top mansion built by the late Maj. James Dooley, of Richmond, and the remainder of the estate is to be offered at public auction on May 20 at 3 p. m. The sale will be conducted at the mansion.

Announcement was made here today by Elsworth Wiltshire, representative of the note holders under the deed of trust.

"Swannanoa" was built by the late Major Dooley for his wife in 1912. In 1926 it was purchased by a group of business men to be used as a country club. The project was unsuccessful and the estate was passed back to the Dooley family at public auction.

Present owners are Mrs. Houston, three nieces of Miss Alice Dooley, Mrs. C. B. Woodville, Mrs. L. L. Keiley and Miss Lewis Coralie, all of Sweet Springs, W. Va.; and nuns of the Academy of Visitation of Monte Maria.

The estate, one of the show places of Virginia, is in two counties, Nelson and Augusta. The Skyline Drive passes by the estate gate, the estate overlooks Rockfish Valley and a view of Shenandoah National Park can be seen.

Invasion Area Havoc Stressed By Stimson

Secretary of War Stimson, in a war review, stressed again yesterday the heavy damage being inflicted by Allied air forces on European communication lines vital to German movement of armies and supplies to combat any invasion thrusts.

A week ago the War Secretary expressed the opinion that such damage was beyond the Nazis' ability to repair, and he told a news conference yesterday the enemy is falling still farther behind in efforts both to improvise communications and conserve defensive fighter plane strength.

Rail System Badly Stricken

"The enemy's transportation system in northwestern Europe appears to have been shaken badly," Stimson said. "The Nazi fighter force has beep reduced and enemy air opposition is sporadic, but they can still muster considerable strength in the air to meet an attack which they consider threatens a vital installation."

On other fronts, he reported:

The enemy withdrew 3 to 11 miles along a 20-mile front near the Adriatic end of the line in Italy with the British Eighth Army advancing. Allied air operations based in Italy are growing in power, and the attacks on Bucharest railway yards have disorganized and shattered traffic into that area. The capacity of oil refineries at Ploesti has been reduced at least temporarily to less than one-fourth normal.

The Red army's capture of Sevastopol, completing the Crimean campaign, gives the Soviet forces sea and air bases to dominate the Black Sea and threaten the Romanian coast, and also frees the Soviet armies in the Crimea for use elsewhere.

I nthe Pacific, Allied forces have consolidated new positions, and are now using Hollandia airfields. In the Admiralty Islands 3180 dead Japanese have been counted, 1100 more are estimated to have died, and Allied forces captured 158 prisoners. Around Hollandia and Aitape, 1502 Japanese were killed and 290 captured in 2½ weeks after the landings. Our losses were small.

"It is significant that the number of Japanese surrendering is increasing," Stimson remarked.

4064 Jap Planes Destroyed

The Army Air Forces in the Pacific—the Fifth, Seventh, Eleventh and Thirteenth—between December 7, 1941, and March 7, 1944, destroyed 3072 Japanese planes in aerial combat and 992 on the ground, a total of 4064, while losing 1163 to all types of enemy action. These figures include American planes lost in the Philippines and Hawaii early in the war.

China-Burma-India theater—Allied ground forces are making advances in India and Burma, but in China, the Japanese have taken control of much of the railway route from North China to Hankow.

The Army rolls on RUBBER
—Rubber that's made with Soap!

WITHOUT RUBBER, our planes couldn't land, our tanks couldn't roll and our big guns couldn't move. The farmer's tractor would rust in the shed, and the war worker couldn't get to work.

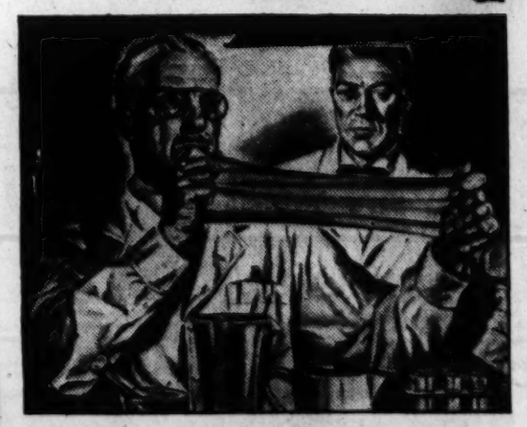
Real rubber is rare. But miracles are being performed by our rubber companies and our oil companies—yes, and important work is being done by our soap companies—to bring the output of synthetic rubber up to the nation's needs.

The work of the rubber and oil companies is familiar to all, but the soapmaker's part may come to you as a great surprise.

Soap plays a vital part in the manufacture of rubber. It is the material which is depended upon for emulsifying the butadiene, the styrene, and the other things that help make synthetic "stretch". Over 30 pounds of soap go into making the tires for a good-sized truck. It takes 10 pounds to "shoe" a Jeep.

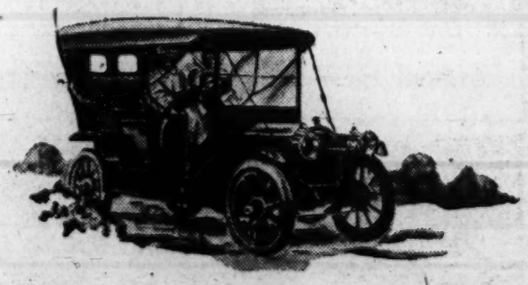
So today, at Procter & Gamble, we are making quantities of soap for synthetic rubber in addition to our production for every other use. We are doing everything a soapmaker can do to help win the war. All our plants, all our people are at the service of the nation as they have been, in war and in peace, for 107 years.

SOAP IS A STRATEGIC MATERIAL—don't waste a sliver! Upon soap, the cleanliness and health of the Home Front depend. Soap has many industrial uses, too. Uncle Sam's mushrooming synthetic rubber industry alone uses over 100,000,000 pounds of soap a year!



BY THE PROCESS OF "POLYMERIZATION," the chemicals, butadiene and styrene, are converted into Buna-S synthetic rubber. To make the process successful, all the ingredients must be kept in close contact with each other. Chemists call this step "emulsification." The material they are depending on to help bring about "emulsification" is soap!

LONG BEFORE PEARL HARBOR, Procter & Gamble chemists were working on soaps used in making rubber. They succeeded in developing the first satisfactory soap for making Buna-S synthetic rubber. And today, man-made rubber is helping to save American lives all over the face of the globe. It goes into a long list of military and naval necessities—from rafts, to adhesive tape, from raincoats to gas masks.



TIRE MAKERS HAVE LONG USED SOAP. Since the days of the flivver jokes, soap has coated molds in which tires are made. Thus, soap is needed for processing natural rubber as well as for synthetic rubber.

The State of Virginia, through the purchase of 29,000 shares of the stock, recently secured 500,000 cases of additional whisky from the American Distilling Co. for release through State liquor stores.

Had more dealers been familiar with the arrangement, it is believed that at least 60 per cent would have taken advantage of it.

Bong's Unrecorded 'Kill' May Make Score 28; Ace Describes His 'Last' Battle With Japs

(Final chapter of the thrilling story by Maj. Richard I. Bong of Poplar, Wis., Southwest Pacific No. 1 ace, who has shot down 27 Jap planes, but may be credited with an additional, as he reveals here.)

By Maj. Richard I. Bong
(As told to Lee Van Atta.)

Distributed by International News Service. Copyright 1944 by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Fighter Base, New Guinea, May 11 (INS).—My last combat in the air was on April 12 at Hollandia which our forces have recently captured from the Japs.

I say "my last" because General Kenney, air chief in this theater, put me on "the shelf" that day—the day I both tied and bettered Eddie Rickenbacker's World War I record of 26 enemy aircraft shot down.

Now I am going home again—this time to learn gunnery school teaching techniques. I can't say I'm very happy about it—although I'm looking forward to seeing my family again.

The hardest I ever sweated was the night and morning following my last combat mission over Hollandia.

You see, I had my cameras set wrong so there was no really accurate photographic report of the victories I claimed that day.

Confirmation Required

It depended on whether or not members of the flight could give positive confirmation.

The fighter pilots were strung from one end of New Guinea to the other that night and it wasn't until the next morning that the fighter command could get them together and take a reading on what had happened.

Fortunately for me, not one, but several, pilots witnessed my first two "kills"—so that put me over the top.

Actually I'm claiming another plane at Hollandia that day.

I got separated from the rest of the unit after the first couple of minutes of combat. I had spotted one lone Nip roaming around and doing his best to keep away from us. I went over and had it out with him.

I know the exact spot where he crashed into the water—it's on a kind of coral shell, not very deep.

Another "Kill" For Record

General Kenney has promised that as soon as we have Hollandia well enough developed he'll get a diver to go down and collect enough wreckage to justify officially confirming it as another "kill."

But coming back to that last day of combat—

I had tacked on to a flock of long range P-38's which were being led by Major Jay Dodkins of Collidge, Tex. (Jay is the No. 2 ace in New Guinea now with 18 confirmed victories).

We were escorting "heavies" to Hollandia.

We were flying in staggered formation from about 12,000 feet on up. Then, over the radio, I heard there were about 20 Zeros hugging close to the jungles around Hollandia and Lake Sentani.

Japs Averse to a Fight

We went tearing down en masse. The Japs didn't want to fight and didn't seem to disguise the fact either.

Of course, when we closed in on them they made a pretense of resistance.

The last one I snared that day—the one I'm counting on to bring my score to 28—was probably the cagiest I ever tangled with.

When he wasn't trying to make tracks toward Tokyo, he was engaging in some plain and fancy acrobatics.

That made my shots—especially since we were about 10 feet off the water most of the time—a little more difficult than usual.

I really got in one long burst, though, and it must have raised cain with his right wing. He went down right after that burst.

I think that particular Jap was more scared than anything else. He was strictly a third-rate flier, although his acrobatics weren't too bad.

Looking over 18 months of combat, it isn't hard for me to realize the things I believe have contributed most to my being pretty successful against the Jap.

First, and to repeat something I've already mentioned, I've been lucky in getting the breaks of frequent contact with the Nip, and contact with him in a really top-notch fighter plane.

Secondly, I was fortunate enough to get in a great deal of gunnery training in flying school, while I still think I am an inferior shot to pilots like Maj. George Welch (of Wilmington, Del.).

The third point is more or less inherent—I have always had a real respect for planes and I don't think I've ever needlessly asked for more than they were made to deliver. If you take them that way your chances of coming out in one piece are way above even.

Saw Light as Instructor

The fourth point is linked with the last two: Before getting my first combat assignment, I was given an assignment I hated at the time but now realize it was the best thing that ever happened to me.

When I was graduated from flight school, they made me an instructor—that hurt my pride and I didn't like the assignment at all. But about the second week, I began learning how very little I really knew about flying—the fastest way to recognize your own shortcomings is to try to teach someone else.

What taught me a lesson I believe most important of all and certainly influenced my combat flying to the greatest extent was that I learned humility and respect for an airplane.

Yugoslavs Report Defeat Of Nazi Drive

London, May 11 (AP).—A strong German general offensive that developed throughout Yugoslavia in recent weeks has been defeated in most sectors by the partisan armies of Marshal Josip Broz (Tito), a Yugoslav bulletin said today, declaring 40,000 Bulgarian troops had joined the Axis in fierce fighting at the Yugoslav-Bulgarian border.

With the failure of their widespread assaults, the Nazis now "are applying on all sectors a strategy of surprise attacks, with the intention of plundering and wiping out the population," said the broadcast communique. It asserted that Mihailovic Chetniks, dressed in German uniforms and "serving the occupationists as lackeys," are participating.

"In Macedonia fierce fighting is continuing," the communique said. "the enemy is trying with all its strength to cut off units from Bulgarian partisan detachments which are fighting on the borders between Yugoslavia and Bulgaria."

Packing Company Heir's Wife Seeks Custody of Son

Los Angeles, May 11 (AP).—Seeking a writ of habeas corpus to obtain possession of the couple's 4-year-old son, Mrs. Elizabeth Heinz, Baltimore socialite, filed charges in Superior Court today that her estranged husband, Clifford Heinz 2d, packing company heir, had hired a man to conceal himself unclad in her hotel apartment.

She identified the man in the case as a former Austrian count and ski instructor with whom Heinz has charged his wife had been intimate.

She declared today her husband hired him to conceal herself disrobed in her bathroom, where he was discovered.

Mrs. Heinz denied her husband's charges that she had offered to trade their child for a Cocker Spaniel dog.

The child is being cared for by Heinz's mother, Mrs. Sarah MacLean, in Beverly Hills. The custody case is set for trial May 23.

Association Acknowledges Gifts to Mount Vernon

Gifts received by the George Washington estate during the last year were listed yesterday at the annual grand council of the Mount Vernon Ladies Association of the Union. Because of wartime conditions the session was one of the briefest in the 91-year history of the organization, opening at 10 a. m. and adjourning in mid-afternoon in contrast to previous meetings lasting from 5 to 10 days.

Mrs. Lucien Mason Hanks of Madison, Wis., regent of the associaton, presided at the council which was marked by a limited attendance of vice regents representing nearby States. No new activities were planned for the coming year and the meeting adjourned until May, 1945.

Important items listed among the gifts received include a pastel portrait of Mrs. Washington believed to have been painted from life by an unknown artist, presented by the Misses Laura and Virginia Mitchell of Charles Town, W. Va., descendants of both Mrs. Washington and General Washington's sister, and a soap jar used at Mount Vernon during the general's life time, a gift from Miss Emily Mackubin, a descendant of Mrs. Washington.

From Mrs. DeCourcy W. Thom, vice regent for Maryland in the association, the estate received a collection of manuscript documents relating to the domestic life of General and Mrs. Washington at Mount Vernon.

U. S. Employes Over 30 Get Draft Deferment

Federal employes 30 and over will be given what amounts to a blanket deferment from the draft for at least the next six months as a result of the new draft regulations issued today by Selective Service Director Lewis B. Hershey. The new regulations also will require the Puryear Committee that passes on draft deferments to ease up on Government men between the ages of 26 and 30. However, the draft status of all men 30 and over must be cleared through the Puryear Committee despite the blanket order from Selective Service that men between the ages of 30 and 37 be deferred for six months if they are "participating" in an essential war activity. Men in Government between the ages of 26 and 29 can be deferred if they are found to be "necessary to and regularly engaged in an essential war activity."

At his press conference, Major General Hershey made it clear that the Puryear Committee should apply the same standards to Federal workers as he has laid down for war workers in private industry. And this would mean the blanket deferment of nearly all Government men 30 and over. The general stressed that the standards should be applied uniformly for men in war work. And he observed that Government is on the list of essential war activities as defined by the War Manpower Commission. The Puryear Committee met yesterday afternoon to map out machinery for the mass deferments and as soon as it agrees on a plan, the Selective Service will forward instructions to local draft boards.

What will happen, apparently, is that applications for deferment must be filed with the Puryear Committee for almost every Government man 30 and over who is now in 1-A. The local boards then would reclassify the workers either 2-A or 2-B. Private employes can file applications direct with the local boards. It was feared yesterday by Federal workers that the existence of red tape and the delay that naturally will follow in getting their cases before the local draft boards will result in the induction of many older Government men. It also was pointed out that local draft boards can reject applications for deferment and order Federal workers to report for induction despite their age and occupations. The boards can apply its own standards of "participating" and "essential" war work.

General Hershey explained that he didn't have the authority to extend the blanket deferment to Federal workers as the Lodge Act gave the Puryear Committee the authority to pass on Government deferments and to make recommendations to the local boards. However, it was recalled that many local draft boards have continued to call up Federal workers over 26 despite the order of several weeks ago which was intended to delay their induction. Such a furor has been raised over deferments in the Federal service that department heads have refused to appeal the cases of men in the 30's. The first official action taken as a result of the new regulations was by the State director in Idaho and he ordered Government men 30 and over placed in 1-A postponed. If this policy is followed by other State directors until the Puryear Committee has time to act the Federal employes will be treated the same as private employes, one of the few times this has happened since Selective Service was set up.

The number of women in the Federal service is now officially more than a million. In its March report, released today, the Civil Service Commission reported the number of women employes as 1,000,998, an increase of 14,502 over February. Total employment in the continental United States on April 1 was put at 2,839,366 by the commission. This is an increase of 11,523 over the previous month and it's the sixth consecutive month that the Government has reported a small increase in employment. But the District continues to decline. During March the number of Federal workers dropped 308 and it brought the total down to 263,393. This figure doesn't include 3790 dollar-a-year men, and people who are serving the Government without compensation.

Senator Hatch's subcommittee of the Senate Judiciary Committee yesterday heard representatives of Washington business firms who favor the Kefauver bill that would permit the salaries of Federal workers to be attached. Today a long list of Government officials will oppose the legislation. It's doubtful if the Senate will approve it . . . Robert Hudson has been appointed assistant to Chairman Fly at Federal Communications. He replaces Norman Jorgenson, who has entered the Navy . . . The District public schools are offering to render a service to Government warworkers. A free course, "Travel by Proxy," is being given Wednesday and Thursday nights from 7:30 to 9:30. It's a chance for sweethearts and wives to learn about the countries where their men are. A course in homemaking and family relations will open on May 15. Further information may be had at Central High School, where the courses are held.

Junior Corps Graduates 13 At Bethesda

Graduation ceremonies for 13 members of the Junior Volunteer Corps of Suburban Hospital, Bethesda, were held yesterday afternoon at the hospital.

The girls of high school ages received certificates and specially designed insignia pins in recognition of 48 hours of service they have rendered in various services at the hospital. Presentations were made by Miss Dorothy Glynn, director of nurses.

The Junior Volunteer Corps, composed of 46 girls from 15 to 18, is under the direction of Mrs. Errett C. Albritton of the Women's Auxiliary and Mrs. J. W. Park, assistant chairman of junior volunteer services, who have guided the corps in setting up the organization recently.

Need for new enrollees who are willing to begin training for service this summer and next fall, when many of the present corps will be out of high school and therefore ineligible, was emphasized yesterday by Mrs. Albritton.

"Apply to your high school counselor for further information about joining," she said. Yesterday's event marked graduation of the first group since the corps was organized two months ago.

In the group were Heloise Albritton, Martha Alexander, Jean Anderson, Barbara Andervont, Betty Booth, Nancy Burdick, Diane Ferris, Anne Howard, Ann Kline, Jean Moore, Shirlyann Rowe, Barbara Park and Mary Williams.

Ward service is one of the new responsibilities of the corps when the 4 to 7 p. m. volunteers prepare patients for their evening meal, serve it and, if necessary, feed the patient. Girls also prepare vacated rooms for new patients and do messenger service in the wards.

Officers of the corps elected yesterday were Mary William, president; Hope Anthony, vice president; Barbara Park, secretary-treasurer; Caroline Humphreys, chairman of volunteers for the Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School, and Barbara Adams for Woodrow Wilson High School.

A minimum of four hours service a week is required of each girl in any of the following, pharmacy, wards, office, laboratory, record library, X-ray department and diet kitchen. They wear uniforms of brown and white seersucker jumpers over white blouses.

A request from the Montgomery County Board of Education has been made to the Bethesda USO to notify enlisted and discharged service personnel within its area that adult education program under the board's supervision is open to them as well as citizens of the community, it was announced yesterday.

If 15 persons register for a course in bookkeeping, such a class will be formed. An advanced class in conversational Spanish with instructors from the Cuban Embassy is being held Tuesdays and Thursdays from 7:45 to 9:45 p. m. Registration for all courses will be continued throughout the term.

'Up in Mabel's Room' Rejuvenates Relic Of a Bygone Day

THAT AL H. WOODS' 20-year-old formula for bedroom farce is as good now as it was in the beginning, and probably ever shall be, is being demonstrated this week at Loew's Capitol Theater.

This week's patrons of the F Street "cathedral" will find audiences laughing their heads off at "Up in Mabel's Room," one of the studier survivors of the supposedly dead and gone era of the "Turbulent Twenties," when "Getting Gertie's Garter," "Parlor, Bedroom and Bath," "Ladies Night in a Turkish Bath" and other baubles of like genre also were among Mr. Woods' spicily comic contributions to the art of the theater and the sparkling repartee of the speakeasies.

Originally cut to a slightly baudy pattern for the stage by Otto Harbach and Wilson Collison, "Up in Mabel's Room" has been adapted to the screen before—back about 1926 would be a good guess—but not with quite the skill or fidelity to the spirit and movement of the footlight frolic displayed by Tom Reed in the present Edward Small production for United Artists, directed with a lusty vigor and fine discretion by Allan Dawn.

Close to the Original

Except for an interpolated dream scene and the sandpapering of the dialogue to an approximation of the refined texture habitual to the cinema, "Up in Mabel's Room" is a reasonably faithful carbon copy of Mr. Woods' hilarious hit.

It is, of course, as light as thistledown and only half as sane. An uncounted number of newlyweds and nearlyweds are involved in a frenzied fight for their romantic lives as the result of a presumably innocent gift of some intimate articles of apparel by a young businessman to the former flame who since has become the ominous shadow cast across his bride's happiness. In Mexico it was. So in New York, the main idea is to recover the garments, destroy the condemnatory evidence and thus salvage the domestic security of a surprising number of people.

That is a chore that leads to a weekend party, through an uncounted number of bedroom doors and windows, under beds, into window boxes, through a blizzard and up and down more flights of stairs than there are in the Washington Monument before the trivial cause of all the comic commotion is finally resolved to the satisfaction of all concerned.

The stage made this a very highly seasoned morsel and the screen is not far behind.

Comic Cast of Stature

The surprisingly successful resurgence of this sort of thing must be attributed largely to Producer Small's judicious selection of cast.

Marjorie Reynolds and Dennis O'Keefe are the bride and groom into whose life the embroidered slip brings such turmoil. As its grateful and cagey recipient, now engaged to the groom's business partner, Gail Patrick is handsomely cast in the title role, with Lee Bowman, "Old Faithful" himself, equally maladroit as the most trustful swain ever bulging with doubt. Charlotte Greenwood, one of the most reliable of the comediennes, is hostess to the madhouse party and Mischa Auer the long-suffering waiter called in to buttle ridiculously and recover the elusive lingerie for a fee that mounts progressively, as the going gets tougher and tougher, from $100 to $400. Binnie Barnes, John Hubbard, Fred Kohler, jr., Janet Lambert and Harry Haden also are present to add to the convulsive confusions.

Not all of their lines are as funny as they used to seem, but they are funny enough—unless yesterday's first audience was putting on a better "act" than the actors.

Lively Stage Diversion

The new stage bill whipped up by Managing Director Gene Ford likewise is a gay and lively affair. The Glenns, two men and a girl, who have evolved an unusual interval of gymnastics that relies heavily on the law of leverage, open the goings-on suavely enough, and the feminine Herzogs, skilled trapeze artistes, close it.

In between are Mitzi Mayfair and Arthur Blake, coheadliners of the revue, in their highly perfected individual specialties. The abundantly talented Miss Mayfair's, as goes without saying, is singing and dancing, which she does in a manner no other youthful "single" ever has been quite able to match; Mr. Blake's, character impressions that maintain an unusually high level of excellence.

The issue of the March of Time devoted to "The Irish Question" and the matter of Eire's neutrality—without shedding too much new light on an old subject—the Fox Movietone News, Milt Slosser's humorously diverting organlogue, and Sam Jack Kaufman's two-part overture, dedicated to Mother's Day and the Wac recruiting drive, with vocals by Lynn Allison and Bobbie Simpson, complete a bill that got off to a flying start yesterday and promises to keep going great guns throughout its allotted seven days.

Materials for Fairfax Roads To Be Available This Year

Arlington-Fairfax Bureau of The Post.
Arlington, Va.: Tel. CH. 9289.

Probability that funds and material will be available for treatment of 18 miles of secondary roads in Fairfax County during the year beginning July 1, was announced by State Highway District Engineer W. I. Mount. The statement was made at a public meeting to air road problems, attended by members of the board of supervisors, Engineer W. Frank Smith, State highway resident engineer and residents.

The board adopted a resolution addressed to the State highway commission, requesting that the mileage as submitted by Smith be approved, if the material and funds are available.

It had been understood earlier in the year that only material needed for road maintenance would be available this year, because of war restrictions. But Mr. Mount said the commission has learned that material for new road construction now may be had.

The supervisors authorized County Treasurer Lewis M. Coyner to deposit $125,000 in the county building fund with the Peoples' National Bank of Charlottesville, Va., the bank to deposit approved bonds in escrow as collateral. The fund will draw interest at 1 per cent per annum.

The Alexandria School Board appointed 27 new teachers and confirmed the reappointment of all of approximately 300 teachers in the system of 12 public schools who reapplied for positions during the term opening in September, it was announced yesterday at the office of Superintendent of Schools Thomas C. Williams.

Also during the monthly meeting of the board Wednesday night at the new school system offices, 207 South Patrick st., the members headed by Arthur King, chairman, drew up applications to be submitted to the Federal Works Agency for two Lanham Act grants, one for $82,000 as a nursery and day-care appropriation, and the second for $17,000 to pool with the city's expenditures for maintenance and operation of schools in the Alexandria defense area.

The 82,000 grant would cover renewal of the annual grant for conducting five nursery schools which expires in June and would provide for two new year-round day-care centers for school-age children from 6 to 13 years of age at Jefferson School on West st. and Mount Vernon School on Mount Vernon ave. Present prices of whiskey

Hiram Walker brands are supplied regularly, yet due to wartime demands your dealer often will be unable to furnish the brand you request

OUR GOVERNMENT has found it necessary to place higher taxes on many things in order to raise the billions of dollars needed to win this war.

And whiskey is one of the things on which a higher excise tax has been placed. In altering the prices, the distillery, the wholesaler, and the retailer are adding only the exact amount of the new tax, without "mark-up."

Since our plants stopped distilling whiskey in 1942 the only changes in official prices of Hiram Walker brands have been those due to excise taxes and OPA adjustments.

The official OPA prices of Hiram Walker brands in this State are now as follows:

Canadian Club
Blended Canadian Whiskey 90.4 proof. This whiskey is 6 years old
$5.10 4/5 QUART $3.21 PINT
OFFICIAL OPA PRICES ON CANADIAN CLUB IMPORTED AFTER MARCH 31, 1944—INCLUDING LATEST FEDERAL EXCISE TAX

Signet
Bottled-in-Bond Rye Whiskey. 100 proof
$3.87 4/5 QUART $2.45 PINT
OFFICIAL OPA PRICES—INCLUDING LATEST FEDERAL EXCISE TAX

IMPERIAL
Blended Whiskey. 86 proof
30% straight whiskey
70% neutral spirits distilled from fruit and grain
$3.27 4/5 QUART $2.05 PINT
OFFICIAL OPA PRICES—INCLUDING LATEST FEDERAL EXCISE TAX

A substantial quantity of Hiram Walker brands is supplied regularly to this area. Yet the wartime demand is so great that your dealer often cannot furnish the brand you request. In fairness to him, please be patient and remember that the whiskey shortage is real... due to the war work of the distilleries. The best way to obtain your favorite brand is to ask for it every time!

It's done with Lights

★ View of one of the newly installed Centralized Traffic Control system boards which controls train operations on various busy sections of track along the Santa Fe in California, New Mexico and Texas.

How the Centralized Traffic Control System is speeding shipments along the Santa Fe

You've seen a miniature railroad controlled by a central board.

Here you see how traffic is controlled on an important stretch of Santa Fe track in almost the same fashion.

On Santa Fe's big Centralized Traffic Control boards, miles of track are laid out in miniature scale before the eyes of the operator. Lights show the location of each train.

By simply turning a lever, the operator can signal an engineer miles away to take his train into a siding to clear the track for a train coming from the opposite direction.

It eliminates the issuing of train orders, cuts down the detention of needed freight cars, and conserves manpower and engine power.

It permits a greater use of track and switching facilities, virtually adding another "mainline" to important parts of the Santa Fe System.

This efficient "C. T. C." system is just one more step Santa Fe is taking to move more vital war freight faster.

Pestilential

If Washingtonians were a less-complacent breed, they would be up in arms over the disgusting and dangerous fact that this Capital City is overrun by diseased wild dogs and rats. Rabies has been a real menace in the District and surrounding counties for more than a year. It is getting worse. Now medical science has discovered that the pernicious Weil's disease, which has the symptoms of grippe but often leaves the liver impaired, is being spread here by rats and wild dogs. Such flagrant neglect of elementary precautions against plagues in the Capital is a national disgrace.

Health Officer Ruhland sounded the alarm on rabies about a year ago and asked for legislation that would permit him to combat it effectively. The Commissioners ordered dogs to be muzzled in accord with an ancient superstitution that muzzling is preventive of rabies. Then they appear to have forgotten the whole menace while the number of victims of mad dogs has steadily risen. Last year 104 dogs known to be rabid and many others suspected of having the disease were killed. Already this year the known total has reached 73 and is climbing rapidly. Persons bitten in a little more than four months number 51. Officials recently stopped the sale of stray dogs at the pound, but little else has been done. The muzzling order is openly ignored and the police do nothing about it. The city's "fight" against a grave epidemic is a fiasco.

Spread of the disease is virtually invited by the failure of the powers that be to do anything about the 35,000 unlicensed dogs that are said to be running wild in Washington. Apparently many of them are rabid. Yet the means of rounding up these dangerous strays remain utterly inadequate. The pound is not even open and none of its personnel is on the job at night, when most of the wild dogs roam through the city. If a pack of wolves were thus descending upon the city nightly, the Commissioners might rouse themselves. But in the face of a menace that may prove much more serious than a pack of wolves, they won't even request Congress to modernize the law so as to require dogs to be kept on leash when out of doors. We think it is about time for the people of Washington to react toward these shocking conditions in the spirit of the Boston Tea Party.

Day Care

A committeee of public-spirited citizens will meet today with the District Commissioners to urge that an $18,500 appropriation be added to the Board of Public Welfare budget to provide funds for the continuation of the Child Day Care Center. This center is an information and counseling bureau set up solely for the purpose of advising working or would-be working mothers harassed by the problem of caring for their children. There is a popular notion that the center advises only mothers with children under 2. This is utterly without foundation; the center is concerned with mothers with children of all ages. It is the only such agency in the District. For the past 18 months it has been supported by the Community War Fund, which has recently announced that it will be unable to continue its aid after June 30. The action taken by the Commissioners will, therefore, mean either the life or death of a vital community service.

One of the most confused aspects which the womanpower problem has long posed is the question of whether wartime young mothers should go out to work or remain at home to rear their children. Actually there can be no rigid over-all solution to this dilemma. For the fact is that the motives leading these women to look for work are many and varied: patriotism, economic pressures, the temptation of the swollen pay envelope, and sometimes only a desire to escape the responsibility of parenthood. Each case requires expert and personal handling. The experience of the center points to the fact that these difficulties can best be ironed out by such trained social workers as are employed at the Child Day Care Center. The value of such a technique is clearly brought out by the record. This shows that out of 4823 consultations only 900 cases were referred to foster homes and day nurseries for the care of their children. The rest decided to solve their problem in their own way. The conclusion is that most mothers go to the center before they have canvassed their neighborhood child-caring facilities or are fully aware of the psychological wear and tear on a child of being shuttled between home and outside care. A Day Care Center which serves this screening purpose is certainly an invaluable asset to the community.

In considering the appropriation asked for to administer the center, the Commissioners should bear in mind that the cost is calculated on the number of consultations rather than on the percentage of cases which are taken up. Also it should be remembered that here is no question of financing another welfare project, for the mothers either pay for the day care provided for their children or use the existing District facilities.

The Issue Remains

Termination of the Montgomery Ward case was very unsatisfactory from one point of view: it left the most important issue raised by the seizure still up in the air. Judge William H. Holly was deprived of the opportunity of ruling on the legality of the seizure because the case collapsed before his ruling was ready. Attorney General Biddle had asked Judge Holly to restrain Sewell Avery from interfering with the Government's operation of the company's Chicago store. When the Government withdrew, it naturally lost interest in restraining the company management, so there was nothing for the court to decide in this case. It is a sound rule, as Judge Holly pointed out, which prevents courts from deciding "questions already dead."

But the desirability of clarifying the momentous issue raised by this case seems to us beyond question. The President likened his seizure of this mail-order business to the action of a policeman arresting a citizen against his protests. His analogy falls down for the simple reason that the Government did not rely on the policeman (or, in this instance, the United States marshal) and the courts. It called in the Army. But aside from that fact the case brought into the open Administration claims to enormous powers over the lives and property of citizens during wartime. The disturbing effect of those claims upon liberty-loving Americans cannot be laughed off by irritable accusations that the press and radio are not giving the people the facts.

The fact of overshadowing importance in this case is the following claim of presidential power made by Attorney General Biddle in the arguments before the court in Chicago. He said:

> The President's unquestioned war power extends to any type of business or property that is essential to the prosecution of the war. To wage war successfully and to fulfill his duties as Commander in Chief in time of war, the authority of the President must extend not only to matters of a strictly military nature, but also to all phases of civilian life which contribute in any way to the prosecution of the war. (Italics supplied.) . . . Where the President has found and proclaimed the emergency and need, the courts will not review or, indeed, inquire into the accuracy of the President's findings, or the wisdom, propriety or prudence of his action.

In other words, the Administration asserts that in wartime the rights of citizens are at the mercy of the President. That concept of the presidential office is of profound importance to the people and to Congress. In our opinion it magnifies the powers of the Commander in Chief beyond any reasonable interpretation of the Constitution. So we hope that this issue will soon be carried to the courts in clear and unmistakable form. Meanwhile the collapse of the case in Chicago has the effect of increasing the importance of the inquiry undertaken by the Senate Judiciary Committee. The time for Congress to give thoughtful attention to the transfer of power from legislative to executive hands is long overdue. What Congress can do to deflate the Biddle doctrine is not yet clear, but at the very least it can help the people to understand the transformation that is taking place under the stress of war.

Poll Tax

The Senate is wasting time again on that hardy perennial—the anti-poll-tax bill. A great deal of impassioned oratory is being poured out by opponents of the proposal, of a kind with which we have become familiar from much repetition. Fortunately the danger of a prolonged filibuster appears to have passed. The opposition had originally intended to delay consideration of the bill by staging a preliminary filibuster. That plan was abandoned when assurances were given that a cloture motion would be introduced. Senator Barkley filed such a motion yesterday. Since a two-thirds vote is necessary to invoke cloture, it is considered virtually certain that the motion will be lost. In that case it is believed that the anti-poll-tax bill will be withdrawn. Under the circumstances that is the only wise course of action, for if the cloture motion fails, the way will be open for endless debate on the anti-poll-tax bill. And there is not the slightest doubt that certain Southern Senators are prepared to harangue their colleagues on subjects, relevant and irrelevent, until the crack of doom, rather than permit the measure to come to a final vote.

Unquestionably the filibustering senatorial minority who have repeatedly balked attempts at a showdown on anti-poll-tax legislation are foes of the democratic process of Government, regardless of protests to the contrary. However, they hold the whip hand; the majority have nothing to gain and much to lose by accepting their defiant challenge. The Senate cannot afford to arouse the wrath of the public by permitting a filibuster to continue day after day on anti-poll-tax legislation, thereby holding up action on proposals of immediate urgency for the war effort. Moreover, if the Senate majority were to sit idly by while a vociferous few stalled the legislative machinery by abusing debating privileges, some among them would certainly have cause to regret their passivity when election returns begin to roll in next November.

Secretary Forrestal

The late Dwight Morrow used to cite Rule 6 as one of his favorite rules of conduct. When asked what it was, he replied, "Do not take yourself too seriously." He would then be asked about the other five rules. "There are no other rules," he would add laconically. Well, James Vincent Forrestal always has been a living example of Rule 6. He has never taken himself too seriously. The characteristic, of course, makes for dangerous living—if you don't take yourself too seriously, possibly other people won't, and your dignity may suffer in consequence. But Secretary Forrestal doesn't think so, nor did some very immortal Rule Sixers, such as Abraham Lincoln, Emerson and Oliver Wendell Holmes.

The fact is that the new Secretary of the Navy has won the respect as well as the esteem of both Congress and the White House. Proof is that when Secretary Knox died, only one name was heard on the Hill, and that was his. The President seemingly was in no two minds about Mr. Knox' successor. With a celerity which is most unusual for Mr. Roosevelt, he named Mr. Forrestal to the vacancy. Richly has the honor been earned. No small share of the credit for making the Navy really second to none is due to the sleepless effort of Mr. Forrestal as Undersecretary. The new Navy was born in the shipyards, it was munitioned in the Nation's factories. The job belongs by law to the Navy's Undersecretary. He has done it without fuss or feathers, but in a way which will leave a shining mark in our country's annals. The entire personnel of the Navy know and appreciate what Mr. Forrestal has accomplished. That is why the keenest hope prevailed in the service itself that Mr. Roosevelt wouldn't go outside the department for the new appointee.

The new Undersecretary, whoever he may be, will inherit the benefit of Mr. Forrestal's organization. He will find two sides to it. Mr. Forrestal has been saving money as well as spending it. A mark of his—shall we say it?—liberalism is to be found in the care he has taken to see that Navy contracts are properly renegotiated. He got together for this purpose as capable and as fair-minded and as public-spirited a committee as can be found in Washington. Now he must leave all this work to his successor, though we have no doubt that his successor will want to take advantage of his counsel and his judgment.

Mr. Forrestal becomes Secretary of the Navy at a time when the word has gone out to prepare the plan for a combined department of war. Out of his experience he knows the waste involved in maintaining separate procurement systems for Army and Navy. It may be that he might help to anticipate the organizational reform by trying to work a sort of interim arrangement for the prevention of overlapping in procurement. It would be a job that might justifiably be expected of him. The new Secretary is no stickler for pecedents, he Secretary is no stickler for precedents, he hasn't lost his youthful zest for change, his zeal for reform. He is the sort of man who wants to be part of progress. Having grown rather than swollen at his post in Washington, Secretary Forrestal seems destined for continued growth.

Debt Limit

The House spent several hours last Wednesday debating a bill to raise the debt limit from the present figure of 210 billion to 240 billion dollars. The discussion covered a wide range of topics. The Administration's spending proclivities came under fire, as did the sale of interest-bearing public securities to commercial banks. There was also considerable discussion of the postwar problems resulting from the creation of a huge mass of indebtedness. The interchange of ideas may have had some educational value, but obviously it did not affect the vote on the debt-limit bill, because every Congressman knew that the debt limit had to be raised to permit the Government to borrow the money it must have to finance the war program.

We want not only to draw attention to this waste of legislative time, but also to the foolishness of the final decision. The Ways and Means Committee bill sets the new debt limit at only 240 billion dollars instead of the 260-billion-dollar level originally requested by the Treasury. The House approved. We fail to see that any good purpose is served by raising the debt ceiling in such a grudging fashion. This ultraconservative procedure will not save money. All it means is that if the war continues, and spending for war proceeds according to plan, Congress will be compelled to raise the debt limit again early in 1945, and spend more time in futile debate.

WHERE THE HEART IS

We who are dead, entreat you, do not weep!
Dear is remembered earth and her glad hours:
The sounds of April dawns when maple flowers
Redden the flagstones; song of brooms that sweep
And swish through blossoms, heard in waking sleep;
Twilight, and Hesperus hung by gold-topped towers
Of western thunder and the pale star-showers
That light the night of love. With these we keep Faith, for we are these: cloud and blowing tree,
We are the sun, the earth, the lucent star—
Oneb reath, one body made ethereal
Beyondthe inflection of unfertile war.
Time may not violate their memory,
Nor death destroy nor alter them at all.

Poll Tax Issue

By Mark Sullivan

Federal Powers

THE PROPOSAL to abolish the poll tax as a requirement for voting in the eight States in which it still exists—and to do this by action of the Federal Government at Washington—fits into a tendency and process that has been under way for several years. It is a process of change in the whole pattern of American Government and society—a change so far-reaching that if accomplished it would be, in the words of Dorothy Thompson describing it when it was getting under way some years ago, "profoundly revolutionary."

The attempted change follows four principal lines:

Enlargement of the power of the Federal Government at Washington, and of the executive, at the expense of the rights of individuals—increased power of the Federal Government to regulate the individual and put compulsion upon him.

Enlargement of the power of the executive at the expense of Congress.

Enlargement of the authority of the executive at the expense of judicial discretion on the part of the courts—an enlargement suggested by Attorney General Biddle when, in asking a court to sustain the President's seizure of Montgomery Ward, he said, "Particularly in time of war the court should not substitute its judgment for that of the executive." (This elevation of the executive was, of course, inherent also in President Roosevelt's unsuccessful attempt to change the Supreme Court in 1937).

IMMENSE ENLARGEMENT of the power of the Federal Government at Washington, at the expense of the States and other local subdivisions of government.

Of all the attempted steps composing this tendency and process, possibly the most deep-reaching is the proposal that a qualification for voting, practiced in a small number of States, shall be abolished by an act of the Federal Government. It is deep reaching because it would undermine the very existence of the States as units of government. Of all the functions exercised by any unit of government, that which has to do with voting is the most fundamental. Take that away and ultimately little would remain.

At present the whole function of voting is exercised by the States exclusively, none of it by the Federal Government. The present proposal is that some of this function shall be taken from the States and be exercised by the Federal Government. If, by passage of the pending measure, a part of this function is taken over by the Federal Government, it will establish a principle and precedent by which other parts can be taken over. If the Federal Government can abolish the poll tax as a qualification for voting in eight States, it can by the same principle abolish or change other voting requirements in all the 48 States—such familiar qualifications as those having to do with residence in the State and voting district, citizenship, literacy and the like. A Senator from New York, for example, who votes to abolish the poll tax as a voting qualification in Georgia, by his action asserts that Congress has power to abolish or change the qualifications of residence or citizenship or literacy or any other in his own State.

THE MERIT OR demerit of the poll tax is not the real question. It has come to be commonly disapproved. Member after member of Congress from States which still have the poll tax, but who oppose abolition of it by action of the Federal Government, have said, in effect, to quote words of Senator Russell of Georgia: "I do not favor the poll tax." Because of this sentiment, the poll tax is being gradually abolished by action of the States themselves. Formerly common, it was abolished by Massachusetts some 50 years ago. An equivalent, requiring that some kind of tax be paid as a qualification for voting, was abolished in Pennsylvania as recently as some 15 years ago. North Carolina abolished the poll tax 24 years ago. Two other Southern States, Louisiana and Florida, abolished it within recent years. In three of the eight States in which it still exists, movements to abolish it are now under way.

One point should be borne in mind. The poll tax does not discriminate between Negroes and whites—a Negro can pay it and vote, as a white man can pay it and vote. There are voting devices in some Southern States which discriminate between the races—but the poll tax is not one of them. The organizing of Negroes in support of the pending measure before the Senate must have a motive other than resistance to discrimination. In the Senate debate it was asserted that the drive for the measure comes in large part from sources other than Negro.

Majority Rule

Permit me to thank you for the excellent editorial in this morning's Post on "Majority Rule."

What you say about the approval of treaties is persuasive. Whether the day of a "family of nations" is sufficiently near at hand to warrant departure from the "two-third rule" may be debatable but the idea has much merit and your contribution toward arousing public interest in it is most commendable.

Counter-Invasion

By Paul Schubert

Possible German Strategy

GERMANY IS on the defensive.

This means that, on the whole, Germany is unable to choose the battleground of 1944's invasion strategy. Germany may be able to influence our choice of battleground, by making some places stronger than others, so that we avoid those places. Germany may try, in this way, to use the familiar football "mousetrap" strategy—to leave soft openings for us to plunge through only to cut us down with an alert secondary defense.

Much of Germany's military establishment, in the west, is stationed in fixed fortifications—the Atlantic Wall.

Such a defensive deployment eats up men, and is very costly, since the men stationed at places where no attack strikes are wasted, from a point of view of positive defense. The very nature of fortifications makes it almost impossible to shift these troops to meet danger elsewhere.

The men stationed in fortifications correspond to the linesmen in football.

BEHIND THE line there is a mobile force—corresponding to the backfield—which can be used to plug the gaps. The strength and skill of this mobile force is very important to Germany, for it will probably soon find itself fighting one of the year's decisive battles.

As originally conceived, Hitler's German army was not a defensive army, but an organization planned, equipped and trained for the offense. German strategists believe in hitting first, and hitting hard. Only a fragment of the German army of 1939 was deployed in fortifications. Mobility was the keynote. Mobile hitting power was the goal.

On the defensive, German strategists strive to be as "dynamic" as possible. German defensive is built around the idea of the counter-attack. If the enemy hits you, parry his punch if you can—dodge it or block it or roll with it . . . but you don't stand there with your iron jaw stuck out—you hit back at him, as hard and as dynamically as you can. Perhaps you will catch him off balance . . . perhaps you will find him weary after he has spent his first rushing attack.

PERHAPS YOU may be able to wrest the offensive from him. In any event, you must use all the weapons you have, for all they are worth—for war is a fight for life, and to allow any part of your strength to go unused, is to play into the enemy's hands.

In building the German offensive army, the leaders of the Wehrmacht created strong forces of paratroops and airborne infantry. These are offensive troops.

Germany probably lacks the military strength, and almost certainly lacks the shipping to beat us to the gun, this year—to start the invading and seize the offensive.

But it is quite possible that Germany's airborne army may be sent on a counter-invasion of England, to make as much trouble there as possible, gumming up communications and "containing" allied troops in a nuisance war. If this happens, Britain's middle-aged Home Guard will be very much in the news.

Bond Sales Slump

I wish to commend the forthrightness of your editorial today "Bond Sales Slump." It has become increasingly apparent, as your previous editorials on the subject have predicted, that the rate of redemption of war savings bonds is accelerating steadily. This trend can no longer be put aside as due to tax payment dates for with the present system of tax collection every day is such a date and furthermore the large redemptions no longer coincide with the regular quarterly payment dates, but are taking place continuously.

Of course, a system of compulsory saving which you have consistently indorsed would have removed this threat of heavy redemptions by providing that enforced purchases must be made of Government bonds which would not have been cashable for the duration. But there seems to be little likelihood of the Congress adopting such a measure at this stage, particularly in view of the resistance which the Treasury Department has expressed to it. Perhaps some middle-of-the-road method could yet be devised preserving the voluntary subscription features of the Treasury's program while avoiding the threat of these wholesale redemptions. As an attempt in this direction, I would like to suggest that the redemption clause in all war savings bonds sold from now on be amended so that instead of being cashable 60 days after purchase as at present, they would be made cashable 60 days after the cessation of hostilities or after the emergency as determined by the Congress.

It is paradoxical that while the American people are being urged to invest their savings into Government bonds to help pay for the war they should at the same time and in the very midst of this war be given the privilege of embarrassing the entire fiscal program by redeeming these same bonds and thus adding to the burden of collecting the needed funds. The people of the United States would, I feel, gladly respond to an appeal to invest in Government bonds, for the duration if they were asked to; but they have not been asked.

Women Delegation

At the recent convention of the General Federation of Women's Clubs in St. Louis a resolution was adopted urging that a woman be included in the United States delegation at the world peace conference.

That is absurd. One lone woman in the midst of scores, or hundreds, of men! There should be a larger contingent of women and they should represent as many countries as do the men. This is of utmost importance.

For many years and especially since World War I women have been studying deeply into every subject relating to war and the maintenance of peace, and there are today fully as many women as men who are thoroughly qualified to serve as delegates to the coming peace conference.

Labor will doubtless be adequately represented since the twenty-sixth world conference of the International Labor Organization, meeting in Philadelphia, is demanding such representation.

If the men in our Congress, in the English Parliament, in Dominion governments and in governments in exile who are now loudly proclaiming their fervent desire for lasting peace for the world are honest in what they say, they will be glad and thankful to have as many women as men at the great conferences for settlement of the problems confronting a world in turmoil.

It would not be essential that the number of women delegates should equal the number of men from each country; but it would seem most desirable that additional women should be called from the countries in which women, especially during the last 30 years, have been making intensive and factual study of all conditions relating to causes of war and maintenance of peace, namely, Great Britain, Canada, Australia, China and the United Sttes.

Political Expediency

The seizure of the property of Montgomery Ward Co. by presidential order, because of the refusal of the company's executives to accede to the demands of the CIO, once again serves to remind the great 'unorganized' mass of American citizens of the despicable program of political expediency followed by some of our leaders in dealing with strikes and labor troubles.

In the settlement of labor troubles the rule of political expediency has been substituted for the fundamental and traditional American policy of justice and fair play.

Presumably it is less difficult to step in by presidential order, or otherwise, and dictate unfair and unconstitutional demands to unorganized and isolated individuals or businesses than it is to antagonize the leaders and members of 'organized' labor by forcing them to respect, not only the property and the civil rights of employers, but the lives of our soldiers on the battle fronts as well.

The rights of individuals or businesses can be disregarded, because the votes they will control at the next election are few. But, when it comes to the question of antagonizing labor unions and leaders through insistence that they comply with law and order—that is entirely different. They are organized and expected to control many votes.

The most ridiculous spectacle we have witnessed in many years was Mr. Roosevelt's see-saw act with John L. Lewis at a time when Lewis was openly defying the Government, encouraging labor union members to remain on a strike vitally affecting the manufacture of war materials, consequently prolonging the war to some extent, and very possibly causing the loss of American lives.

Yes, the answer is political expediency. Never before during our generation have the rights of the people been so flagrantly and openly disregarded by vote-buying, power-craving leaders, as they have during the past few years.

Sidewalk Photographers

A number of complaints have appeared in local newspapers with respect to the sidewalk photographers as a waste of manpower. I wish to protest that with reference to the local outfits, you don't get your pictures. I delivered my money personally to their former address on F st. in December. Six weeks later I was promised early delivery. Now their office is closed and evidently the same company has begun operations under the seclusion of a postoffice box. These people operate only with a District license. Who is protecting this bare-faced racket?

Welles' View

A Communication

AS AN Argentinian, who for many years has opposed fascism and its appeasement, I wish to raise my voice in criticism of Mr. Sumner Welles' current plea for the recognition of the Farell pro-Nazi dictatorship.

One of his reasons in favor of recognition is that the Farell regime is exercising full authority within Argentina. Need one remind him that Hitler too is exercising full authority within Germany?

Mr. Welles didactically reminds the American liberals who do not wish to collaborate with the Argentine Fascists that democracy within a nation was never created through imposition from abroad. This, I am sure, they know as well as Mr. Welles. They could remind him in turn that neither has democracy within a nation ever been preserved by foreign appeasement of the Fascist domestic elements that were set to destroy it.

Farell Regime

It is clear from his articles that he is determined to protect the Farell regime from the accusation that it is fascist. According to him, it is just one more instance of those "purely nationalistic dictatorships in the Western Hemisphere (which) have risen and fallen for 130 years." The truth of the matter is that the Farrell regime is in no way whatever representative of the democratic, anti-Fascist nationalism of the Argentine people. It represents, rather, a violent suppression of that nationalism. Not only is it unconstitutional, but it is not even a de facto government, as was the previous Ramirez Administration. It is a regime of usurpation, hatched in Madrid and Berlin, as well as in Buenos Aires, and supported by appeasement and reactionary elements throughout the world, including Great Britain and the United States. It is a pro-Nazi regime with expansionist ambitions in neighboring countries.

Mr. Welles greatly underestimates the intelligence of the people of the Americas if he expects them to believe that, since Argentina has broken diplomatic relations with the Axis, the pro-Axis activities of the Farell regime are not endangering the security of the American continent. Has he perchance forgotten that the chief, if not the only, object of the Farell-Peron putsch against the government of former President Ramirez was precisely to prevent the implementation of his break with the Axis? And does he not know that most of the Axis and pro-Axis agents and agencies in Argentina are allowed to continue unmolested in their subversive activities, while all the pro-United Nations groups, political parties, and organizations continue to be entirely suppressed?

As a trained diplomat he should know that, in recognizing the fascist GOU dictatorship, the United States Government would contribute to its perpetuation in power and to the further suppression of the Argentine people who oppose it. Recognition would be an intervention against the democratic will of the overwhelming majority of the Argentine population and in favor of an unrepresentative Fascist minority.

State Department

Mr. Welles is lamentably mistaken when he asserts that "the present policy of the Department of State toward Argentina has been to inflame all segments of Argentine opinion against us." Apparently he reads only the pro-Nazi Argentine newspapers and is satisfied that they represent the point of view of all Argentinians. Does he not know that there are today in my country no less than 40 anti-Fascist underground newspapers and that they are overwhelmingly opposed to recognition? I submit that the Argentine underground is more entitled than Mr. Welles to speak in the name of the Argentine people.

If I were Mr. Welles I would not worry so much over the possibility that a return of democracy in Argentina may be retarded by an upsurge of popular "nationalistic resentment" resulting from the present United States policy toward the Farell regime. The people of Argentina, and the Latin-American people in general, are less uninformed than Mr. Welles would seem to believe. For the last 12 years they have known the difference existing between the past intervention of United States governments in the interest of exploitive American corporate capital and the present policy of democratic cooperation against the Axis and for the benefit of the Latin-American and American people. I would remember also that of late this alleged Latin-American supersensitivity has become a political racket in the hands of Latin-American pro-Axis pseudo-patriots and their foreign appeasers, by means of which they expect to be able to inhibit the hemispheric action of the people of the three Americas in their fight against Hitlerism.

The Latin-American people welcome the position of President Roosevelt and Secretary Hull because they see in it not a threat to but a guarantee of their economic and political sovereignties.

The Latin-American people want no "Munich" in the Western Hemisphere.

Temporary Seizure

By Ernest Lindley

Montgomery Ward Case

PRIOR TO THE Government's temporary seizure of its Chicago mail order facilities, Montgomery Ward & Co. relied heavily on the assertion that the union did not represent a majority of its employes. Its appeal to the public was based chiefly on that contention.

LINDLEY

For example, in his reply to the President's telegram of April 23, Sewell said: "Although Ward's welcomes an early election, Ward's cannot, under the law, grant special privileges to the union pending the election. To grant maintenance of union membership before the election is held, as the War Labor Board has ordered, would not only violate the employes' fundamental liberty of free choice but it would also permit the union to demand the discharge of all the employes who have resigned from the union since December 8, 1943."

Montgomery Ward widely publicized this reply in newspaper advertisements. To a reasonable person, these sentences would signify, I think, that if the union won the election, Ward's would sign a contract containing a maintenance of membership clause. It had done so before, in December, 1942, under protest but at the direction of the President.

NOW THE UNION has won the election, by a very substantial majority. But Mr. Avery is quoted as denying that that settles the matter, and as saying that the company will continue to fight a maintenance-of-membership clause. This undoubtedly came as a surprise to many who had followed the case at a distance, and particularly to those who had read Montgomery Ward's advertisement and been impressed by its air of sweet reasonableness. It is apparently true, however, that Mr. Avery had never said that he would accept the maintenance-of-membership clause or comply with the War Labor Board's directives if the union won the election. He had said no more than that Ward's would not grant a maintenance-of-membership clause "before the election is held."

Thus it seems likely that there will be more chapters to the history of the Montgomery Ward Chicago case. It should be kept in mind that also this is only one of many War Labor Board cases involving Montgomery Ward. In addition to the Chicago case, there are disputes involving Ward establishments in Denver, Detroit, New York City, Portland (Oreg.), Oakland and St. Paul. In each case Ward's has refused to comply with a WLB order.

There is also a case involving the Hummer Manufacturing Co., a wholly owned subsidiary or division of Montgomery Ward. In that case the company has refused to comply with a WLB order entered last August. That is the case which the board voted on Wednesday to refer to the White House.

THE HUMMER company is engaged in war work. It makes carburetors, propellers and gun mounts for military aircraft. There is no doubt that it is engaged directly in war production. Nor, apparently, does the company question that the union involved—an AFL union—has a majority of the employes.

There may be doubt as to whether the President had the right to seize Ward's Chicago mail order facilities, under either the War Disputes Act or under the emergency wartime powers inherent in his office. The War Labor Board believed that the power to seize in such a case resided in the War Disputes Act. Otherwise there would have been a wide gap between the broad duties to decide disputes granted to the board in the first part of the act and the means of backing up these decisions provided in the seizure section.

Incidentally, in the long history of the Ward Chicago case there has been a whole series of formal votes by the War Labor Board. In these votes, 17 different representatives of industry have participated at one time or another. According to a WLB source, on one vote one industry member disagreed with the rest of the board, but all other votes were unanimous.

It may be that Congress did not intend, in the War Disputes Act, that the executive branch should have the power to seize a large distributing organization. It may have intended to confine this power to the seizure of war production plants. It is difficult to tell what Congress intended in this law, which was rather hastily slapped together and passed over the President's veto.

But the doubt on this point present in the Ward Chicago case would appear to be altogether absent in the Ward-Hummer case if the President deems it necessary to seize the plant in order to settle the strike which broke out a week ago.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

IT LOOKS as though the honeymoon between Secretary of State Hull and his energetic young Undersecretary, Ed Stettinius, were over—well over.

There have been reports for some time that things weren't going so well between them, but all doubt as to the accuracy of these reports vanished when Stettinius came back from London. Close friends say that the two men are now in about the same pistol-drawn position as Hull was with former Undersecretary Sumner Welles.

The climax came when Stettinius arrived at the airport on his return from London. Michael McDermott, efficient State Department press relations chief and one of the four officials closest to Hull, met him. As Stettinius stepped off the plane and posed for the cameramen, McDermott handed him a small piece of paper.

Stettinius held the paper inside his hat so no one could see it and read it. The paper said: "Don't say anything until you see the Secretary of State."

The Undersecretary obeyed orders. But when so important an official returns from so important a mission, it is always customary to hold a press conference and, in deference to repeated demands, Stettinius finally did so.

Furthermore, he talked with refreshing frankness about his trip, about ways and means of discussing peace with Germany, and about other questions of vital concern to the American people. It was agreed in advance that everything should be off the record for the time being, but that Stettinius, after checking with Hull, would release the essential part of his interview for publication.

However, when Hull saw the transcript of Stettinius' remarks, he turned thumbs down completely. He decided that his frank and forthright Undersecretary had best keep his light under a bushel. No word of what Stettinius said has been released, so far, for publication.

Blacklisted Swede

AXEL WENNER-GREN, the big Swedish munitions maker who has been virtually exiled in Mexico, is moving heaven and earth to get himself off the State Department blacklist. He has even gone so far as to get Ed Flynn, Democratic boss of the Bronx and former chairman of the Democratic National Committee, to go to bat on his behalf.

Flynn has been making representations to Secretary of State Hull that Wenner-Gren has had absolutely no connections with Germany and should not be blacklisted. The State Department, so far, has refused to move.

Wenner-Gren came into prominence shortly after war broke when he fled from Sweden on his yacht, the Southern Cross, and picked up survivors from the torpedoed British vessel, Athenia.

After that, he lived for some time in Nassau, near his close friend, the Duke of Windsor, and later moved to Mexico, where the Mexican government seized his palatial yacht.

Wenner-Gren has now requested the State Department to let him come to Washington. He believes that, if he could present his case personally, he could supplement the efforts of Ed Flynn and shake off the blacklist.

Postwar U. S. Bases

A HOUSE NAVAL AFFAIRS subcommittee, headed by Representative Edward Hebert of Louisiana, which recently returned from an inspection tour of United States bases in South America, has made three major recommendations in a report to Congress:

1. Permanent acquisition of British bases in the Caribbean area.

2. Continued operation of eight American military and naval bases in Brazil after the war.

3. The granting to Brazil, and other friendly neighbors in South America, of small surplus warships — destroyers, cutters and patrol boats, which we will not need after the war but which will be useful to South American nations for coast patrol and trade purposes.

Hebert brought out in his report that these surplus vessels could be granted to our South American neighbors in exchange for bases.

Note—The first Hebert recommendation, regarding permanent acquisition of British bases, was canceled for the time being by Churchill's London remarks in which he opposed relinquishing British bases in the Caribbean.

Drive Is Launched For Control of Tuberculosis Rate

Control of Washington's high tuberculosis rate is be sought by health and civic associations through calls to the public to "have your chest X-rayed."

Residents of the area known as Census Tract 48, bounded by New York and Florida aves, 7th st. and New Jersey ave. nw., particularly are being urged to get free examinations at the Polk School, 7th and P sts. nw.

In this area, according to surveys, "tuberculosis caused more deaths . . . than in any other part of the city." And the disease is communicable. "It can be passed from sick people to well people," a pamphlet issued by the Health Department, Tuberculosis Association and local civic groups, warns.

Examinations without charge may be had at Polk School from May 15 through 19, and from 9 a. m. to 9 p. m. daily.

Fourth Term Campaign

THE EXPRESSIONS of surprise and shock that have come from Republicans as a result of Robert Hannegan's signal starting the fourth term campaign must be put down to pure professionalism. It has been perfectly obvious, to Republicans as well as Democrats, that the President intended to run again.

CHILDS

Likewise, Hannegan's statement that he had no idea of Roosevelt's own intentions in the matter must be put down as a professional disclaimer. He is too shrewd a politician to set off that first rocket without knowing exactly what he was doing and where he hoped to go.

I've never taken too seriously the stories of Roosevelt's impaired health. Partly, this was wishful thinking by those who hoped FDR wouldn't run. Partly, it may even have been inspired by the White House so that, in an interval of public uncertainty, the political situation could be carefully canvassed.

The outline of the presidential campaign in the fall is now quite clear. Roosevelt will be engaged in the conduct of the war with little if any time for politics; that is, out and out politics.

HE WILL, of course, find it difficult to look around some of the past blunders of a regime so long in power. For example, his efforts to reduce the Montgomery Ward fight to the simple ABC's of law was a rather pathetic failure. While I believe the Government had no alternative but to act, the way in which the case was handled in Chicago made it into a political shillelah for the opposition.

At least until the invasion blots everything else out, such embarrassments will be batted up to the President and he will have to dodge. Meanwhile, Hannegan will be directing the pick and shovel work.

Strangely enough, the Republican campaign is likely—at the top anyway—to have the same look. Unless I'm proved entirely wrong, Dewey will pitch his appeal on a lofty note. On the international front I think he's going to make speeches that will put one particular voter in something of a dilemma.

That voter is Wendell Willkie. Ever since the morning after his disastrous defeat in the Wisconsin primary, Willkie has been under tremendous pressure to declare that he will support any Republican candidate—even Dewey.

The heat has been pretty severe. Friends have suggested that he might suffer financially if he, as a Republican, failed to fall in line. Those who know Willkie at all should know that this is precisely the kind of pressure calculated to make him resist until the end.

HE HAS BEEN able to accumulate through his own efforts a small fortune that would enable him to live comfortably even though he retired today. Besides stocks, bonds and money in the bank, Willkie has 1200 acres of rich Indiana land which he farms by remote control.

Far more difficult for Willkie will be the decision as to Dewey's sincerity. If the New York Governor makes enlightened speeches on foreign policy, then the question will be whether he can be trusted to implement those policies if he is elected.

While Dewey campaigns on a fairly lofty level, the slugging will be done by other Republicans on quite another level. The effect on both sides of the political fence is likely to be that of a radio with two stations tuned in at the same time.

That the President has returned restored, even the whispers must now concede. When he first went to the Hobcaw plantation, his cough continued for a time to bother him, according to those who were there. Fairly soon, however, he got rid of it. After that he luxuriated in rest and sun with the powers of recuperation he has always enjoyed.

From all reports he is determined to go into the '44 campaign with the same team—Ickes, Morgenthau, Perkins and the rest. That goes too, for Henry Wallace who, according to present reports, will get the presidential nod when the time comes at Chicago. Believing in his destiny, Roosevelt makes few concessions to criticism.

This is my theory, and this I know: There's nothing more futile than looking backward on a one-way road. . . . So, I haven't written, and perhaps I would not have written—since there's nothing more odious than having to write from a sense of duty. But for the last few days your name has been constantly cropping up. First in News Week on the Charlie Chaplin case; then in Louella Parsons' 'Gay Illiterate,' then in the Emily Kimbrough-Cornelia Otis Skinner book. If you want to know how I get hold of such literature, I beg, borrow, or steal it without a trace of conscience, as money becomes more and more useless, except for poker stakes. To secure something, you either talk some one out of it, or swipe it. We hold to the theory that it still remains in Government hands, and merely changes its position. "It has been years since I dwelled so closely to basic fundamentals. Acquisitions become a burden when you have to carry them on your back. What a change in philosophy if that principle could be introduced into civilian life. . . . The Army remains all absorbing in interest. The vast and complicated brain of it; the fumbling soul of it; its manifold effects upon the individual. . . . All values change. The little things become important; the big things become smaller. Just now the company interest is divided equally between the second front and our dog's pregnancy. Bets are being made as to how many pups she'll have. She is a gorgeous creature. A pedigreed cocker, tan in color, who can trace her ancestry farther than any of us. But the father of the pups is a true matter of speculation, since her love — like the war — was all-embracing. . . . There has been a good deal of discussion as to whether we could unload the pups on the civilian population for cash as thorobreds, since it is argued that most young pups look alike. But that would depend strictly on getting to hell out of this section of England before the pooches' uncertain blood began asserting itself. Our getting out may depend upon the second front. As we have no more idea than you when the invasion will start, the cash disposal of the puppies remains, like many other things, in a quandary.

Hollywood Creeps In

"I have just been reading a review of 'Voice in the Wind,' which seemingly turns out to be a sleeper. When you see the picture, please give special attention to the direction, as it was done by an old and loyal friend of mine—Arthur Ripley, who seems to have come into his own. . . . Perhaps you will remember that Arthur directed 'Oscar Wilde,' in which Laird Cregar was discovered. It was his first attempt, and the inside story, mixed carefully with a quart of Scotch, would have you weeping with laughter. But there is neither time nor space to tell it here. . . . Arthur is a rare guy for Hollywood, being like you—disposed to speak his mind and damn the consequences. That's what has kept him down in the industry some 25 years. He lacked the ability to compromise his integrity for the usual run of success. . . . I met him years ago when I had a ditch digging job with Amelia Earhart. He invited me home for a night. We started a discussion that lasted over a month. I remained as his guest until the discussion was finished, letting the ditching job go plumb to hell.

News from the Front

"Incidentally, the gal who wrote 'A Tree Grows in Brooklyn' married an old friend of mine, Joe Jones, an Army private. We met some dozen years ago when the same car picked us up hitch-hiking, and have carried the friendship through the years to this day. What may be news for you is that Harper's is bringing a book out by him this spring, so he writes me, about his life in the Army. Something, I imagine, like 'See Here Private Hargrove,' as it was written much in the same manner as a series of articles for a weekly newspaper. . . . William Saroyan is over here—private first class in the Signal Corps. I would like to know his address, as he is one of the few Hollywoodites I would care about seeing. Chuck Dagget may have his address. If you'd have one of your secretaries check, I'd be very grateful. If you don't know Chuck, an ex-Variety man, he's an invaluable news source, and one newspaper guy with guts enough to break a story.

The Gallup Poll

If Roosevelt Does Not Run, GOP Victory Seen Assured

By GEORGE GALLUP,

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, N. J., May 11.—Striking evidence that the Democratic Party is not only a one-man party but that without Franklin D. Roosevelt at the head of the ticket the Democrats would almost certainly lose the election is revealed in a survey just completed by the Institute.

This shows that one-half of all the voters who want to see Roosevelt remain in the White House for another four years would, if he is not a candidate, prefer to shift parties and vote for a Republican rather than accept another Democratic candidate.

All voters polled in the survey were asked two questions. The first was to name the man they would like to see as the next President of the United States. Among all those who named a Democrat, the choices were in the following order:

Franklin D. Roosevelt	89%
Cordell Hull	4
Henry A. Wallace	3
Alben Barkley	2
James Byrnes	1
Paul V. McNutt	1

All those voters who had named Roosevelt as their first choice were then asked to give their second choice.

The results follow:

How Roosevelt voters would divide if he is not a candidate:

Fifty per cent would prefer one of the Republican candidates.

Fifty per cent would prefer a Democrat.

Henry A. Wallace is the leading choice among those who would still stick with the Democratic Party if Roosevelt did not run. Governor Dewey of New York is the leading choice of those who say they would shift to one of the Republican candidates.

It is clear from the above table that loyalty in the Democratic ranks means, to a very large extent, loyalty to Roosevelt rather than to the party itself.

There seems to be very little doubt in the minds of the American people that President Roosevelt will run for reelection.

When voters of all parties from coast to coast were asked by the Institute, "Do you think that President Roosevelt will run for a fourth term?" the results were as follows:

Think Roosevelt will run	79%
Think Roosevelt will not run	8
No opinion	13

More Minute Men To Be Inactivated

Annapolis, Md., May 11 (AP).—Twelve Minute Men Companies of the Sixth Battalion in Baltimore, Carroll and Harford Counties will be officially inactivated on May 15, Governor O'Conor announced today.

The Governor said the inactivation was requested by Battalion Commander Lieut. Col. John Mowbray who had explained that many of the Minute Men wished to join the State Guard.

Companies in Baltimore City and on the Eastern Shore have previously been reduced to an inactive status to allow the members to fill vacancies existing in the State Guard.

Times Square Tattle

New York, May 11.—To Washington last week, in behalf of the small night-club owners who will have to close their cafes if the 30 per cent tax is continued, went former Assistant District Attorney Noah Braunstein. He went to see Representative Doughton of North Carolina to urge a reduction of this tax. He found Doughton in a room which had a Confederate flag and pictures of Lee and Jeff Davis . . . Doughton seemed unsympathetic, and told the visitor from New York that his North Carolina constituents are not affected by the high night-club tax. "What do you suggest?" Braunstein asked . . . "Talk to Morgenthau," Representative Doughton advised him. "He's one of the Northern boys."

TALLULAH BANKHEAD

Josef Von Sternberg, the movie director, is proud of his collection of modern art. He showed this collection to George Jessel. "Look at this," said Von Sternberg, pointing to a large canvas. "What do you think of it?" . . . Jessel studied it, and said: "Frankly, to me it looks like a lot of fish stepping on a pinochle deck. Am I right?" . . . "No, you're not," said Von Sternberg, sadly. "It's a portrait of my father riding on a horse."

A handsome movie actor, noted for his intellectual deficiencies, was delivering a lecture to Tallulah Bankhead about the American theater. Tallulah shook her head, in bewilderment. "You don't understand me at all?" . . . "If I put half my mind to it," replied Tallulah, "then I'd understand you fully."

The Eighth Air Force's prize film, "The Memphis Belle," will be distributed soon in 11 foreign language versions. One print of the film has been sent to Stalin . . . Mel Most, the A. P. correspondent in Vichy, who spent two years in a Nazi internment camp, learned of the existence of two new bits of Americana during his internment—"Oklahoma!" and Sinatra . . . The unidentified Army sergeant who sat at the principal table at the Jefferson Dinner here Monday is the brother of Robert Hannegan, chairman of the Democratic National Committee.

This is a story told by one of the survivors of the famed "Helena," the cruiser which scored one of the most brilliant records in naval history before it went down: On the last pay day, just before they went into battle, some of the enlisted personnel started a few craps games. The winner of each game then took his winnings to the big game, where a man was having a remarkable streak. He played for eight hours, beating the survivors of the other games, and when he had won $17,000 he said he was tired and would quit. The losers insisted that he continue. "Okay. I'll give you all just one more chance," he agreed. "Shoot the $17,000." The bet was covered, and he carefully piled the bills separately, identifying each individual bet. Then he rolled the dice, and they turned up 11. He jammed his winnings into a duffle bag and went to sleep.

Baronova, the ballerina in "Follow the Girls,' went to Reuben's and there saw a young actress she disliked. Baronova was heard muttering an imprecation. "It's the Ballet curse," the ballerina explained. "It goes 'May all your children have knots in their legs' " . . . Paul Robeson, the former all-America football star, will play first base for the "Othello" nine against the "Jacobowsky and the Colonel Terriers," captained by Lou Calhern. The game, to be held at Central Park this week, will be for the Theater Guild championship . . . A novelist, who paid more than $100,000 income taxes this year, advised some promising young writers: "With these high tax rates, Learn Now and Write Later."

Just before he went off to England Ernest Hemingway pocketed a $50 check from John O'Hara. It was in settlement of a wager they had made. O'Hara, in sending the check, wrote that it was being paid for "an error of judgment" . . . He had insisted to Hemingway that no man could break a shillelah. Ernest disagreed. And when the stakes were arranged, Hemingway grasped a shillelah, placed it on his head, pressed downward, and the shillelah snapped.

Sergt. Marion Hargrove, author of "See Here, Private Hargrove;" Sergt. George Baker, creator of the GI comic-strip private, "Sad Sack," and Lieut. Dave Breger, author of the Private Breger cartoons, met in New York a few days ago. "Let's face it," Breger told them. "The three of us are living in our own reflected glory" . . . This may be old, but it was recited by a physicist during a meeting of scientists who couldn't agree on the Einstein theory:

"There was a young lady named
Dwight,
Whose speed was much faster
than light,
She went out one day, in a relative way,
And came home the previous night."

When Paulette Goddard and William Gargan were on their USO tour of China, Burma and India, one of the people who offered hospitality was a potentate who insisted that they dine at his palace. The Hollywood visitors accepted the invitation. They found the palace to be exactly as they had imagined it, with large, elegant rooms, furnished magnificently. Their host served an excellent dinner, on gold plate, with countless servants in attendance. The champagne was of rare vintage, and the liqueurs were the finest they ever had sipped . . . "And now," suggested the potentate, "would you care for some music?" Miss Goddard and Mr. Gargan nodded. "Come into my music room," they were told, and followed him into a room where their host inserted a coin into a juke box and let them hear Frank Sinatra singing "Sunday, Monday, Always."

Borowy Wins 4th as Yanks Beat Tigers, 5-2

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

It comes up Henry Armstrong vs. Aaron Perry on the night of May 22 at Griffith Stadium and for the promoters it's a fount of black gold they're tapping. The customers may pay as much as $50,000 to see that one, even at the $10 tops the Liberty Athletic Club is blithely charging.

POVICH

An Armstrong-Perry fight was inevitable in Washington. It has been in the making ever since young Perry grew to main-bout stature. Until Perry came along to draw $30,000 gates indoors at Uline's Arena, Armstrong was the No. 1 crowd puller here. The matching of the pair simply awaited warmer weather when the pair of 'em could be tossed into the comparatively limitless capacity of the Stadium.

Right now, Armstrong is a 2-to-1 favorite to beat Perry. Those are the odds posted by the more important bookies. It means if you want to bet on Armstrong you must lay the books 2 to 1. But if you like Armstrong, the books will lay you only 8 to 5. That's how the bookies make a living.

The mere 2-to-1 odds against him are a compliment to Perry, at that. It could be something to boast about for a lad who has been fighting professionally for less than a year.

The Perry camp turned down an Armstrong match two months ago. His manager, Harry Garsh, saw no sense in rushing his lad along in such a hurry. He has acquired new ideas since, however. Uncle Sam's draft board is breathing hot on Perry's neck. It's Perry's chance, and Garsh's, too, for that matter, to get themselves a nice grubstake before Perry goes into the service. Their end could be more than $10,000.

That's a factor in Garsh's decision to throw Perry in with Armstrong, but it's not the only one. In the last two months, Perry has come along and established himself as a solid sort who is not too deeply over his head in good company. He demonstrated that in the Sammy Angott fight. Perry lost that one, but he was not badly outclassed. He proved he belonged in there with good men.

Garsh has been saying that Armstrong is ripe to be licked by a good, strong boy who will stand up and punch with him. That's the premise on which he likes Perry. Armstrong has been fighting for the last 13 of his 31 years. Garsh thinks he has left a lot of his vigor somewhere along the trail, and that may be true.

Armstrong has been winning by decisions in recent bouts in contrast to the knockouts he used to inflict on the same company, but aside from the absence of a knockout punch there is no discernible difference in the style of the Hammer. He is still Perpetual Motion in the ring, in many respects the most amazing physical specimen that ever laced on gloves.

Perry found Angott an elusive target with his dancing, sidestepping tactics. Armstrong is easier to hit, but not on the chin. He keeps his jaw tucked on his shoulder out of harm's way and only the sharpshooters clip the Hammer on the chin. If Perry hurts Armstrong it will be with a body attack. Perry hurt Lew Hanbury everywhere he hit him with the right hand he was using like a club.

It should be very interesting. Perry has never been in there with anybody like Armstrong, perhaps because there's only one Armstrong. You either fight the way Armstrong wants you to fight, or you jump out of the ring. He simply takes no backward steps and Perry's reactions will be interesting to watch.

Against Angott, Perry was very much bewildered at times, but there is nothing bewildering about Armstrong's style. He simply dances at you all the time, chopping with both fists until he sets himself up for those longer lefts and rights. Armstrong can be hit, as we were saying, but his St. Vitus motion permits no set shots.

Armstrong's idea always has been to make his opponent retreat. That's when he catches up with 'em, and unloads his best punches—when they're backing away. Perry doesn't like to retreat. That's what gives him a chance. The punching should be furious.

What isn't in Perry's favor is that Armstrong knows how to finish off a guy. Both Angott and Vic Creelman let Perry off the hook after making his knees buckle with right hands to the chin. If Armstrong connects with a punch that hurts Perry, and that is very probable, well, the Hammer knows what to do in a case like that.

Flock Beats Cards, 2-1, Behind Davis' 8-Hitter

St. Louis, May 11 (AP).—Curt Davis held the St. Louis Cardinals to eight scattered hits as the Brooklyn Dodgers nosed out the league leaders, 2-1 today, to even the series.

Rookie Bill Hart played the hero's role, scoring the Dodgers' first run and batting in the other. He was the only Dodger to get two safeties.

Davis had a narrow escape in the ninth inning when Pepper Martin, attempting to score from first on Ray Sanders' double, was nailed at the plate to end the game.

Brooklyn scored in the fifth on a single by Luis Olmo and Hart's double. They tallied again in the seventh when Hart singled and scored on a two-base hit by Frenchy Bordagaray.

The Cardinals score came in their half of the seventh when Dixie Walker muffed Whitey Kurowski's fly for a two-base error and a single by Marty Marion.

Harry Gumbert suffered his first loss of the season, yielding to Ted Wilks in the eighth for a pinch hitter.

Indians Top Bosox, 7 to 6; Seerey Stars

Boston, May 11 (AP).—In a two-and-a-half-hour contest which saw the visitors trap two Bostonians off base and pull off a double play, the Cleveland Indians defeated the Red Sox, 7 to 6, today, for their second triumph in two days over the home team.

Jim Seerey, Indian center fielder whose home run yesterday proved to be the winning margin for Mel Harder's 200th victory, continued his slugging. He banked out a homer, a single and two doubles.

In the third inning with one out, Bob Johnson doubled to score Fox who had singled and Cronin who had walked. Doerr the next batter walked. Pitcher Allie Reynolds threw to Peters and Johnson was caught. Peters thre wto Keltner who whipped it back to Boudreau for the putout. Boudreau then pegged to Rocco to catch Doerr who had started for second.

The Indians salted the game in the seventh. With the score tied at three runs each, Boudreau singled, Rocco sacrificed him along and the young manager went to third on Cullenbine's single to left, coming home on Hockett's booming fly to Pete Fox in right field.

Keltner walked and Seerey, Peters and Susce singled in succession scoring Cullenbine, Keltner and Seerey.

Ed Klieman, who saved Mel Harder's 200th win yesterday, came in to put out the fire again today in the eighth. With two out and two runs in her got Wagner on a roller to Rocco and made the last three batters in the ninth hit to Peters who threw them out.

An Enviable Record

Ben Jones' Turf Rivals Wonder If He'll Trip

By Orlo Robertson

Baltimore, May 11 (AP).—When Ben Jones sends Pensive to the post in the fifty-forth Preakness at Pimlico Saturday he'll be seeking not only the second leg on the turf's triple crown for the Kentucky Derby winner but a continuation of a record that has other trainers wondering whether the Missiourian can make a mistake.

Since Ben took Warren Wrights' horses South for the Florida racing season this year, he has dominated the turf picture as few trainers have in recent years. He saddled 15 winners, eight seconds and as many thirds at Hialeah and Tropical Park to win $43,460, with Sun Again and Teddy Haste chalking up the major triumphs in the wr rup2-old fififf ..... McLennan handicap and a two-year-old stake, respectively. Moving into Pimlico he has sent out 27 horses to take 11 firsts, six of them stake triumphs, eight seconds, one third, and two fourths in 23 races, a performance that put $82,630 into Wright's pocket.

TRAINER BEN JONES

Jones' Trainees Total $267,915

Sun Again, Twilight Tear and Pensive divided the stake victories. Add Pensive's derby check and you get a grand total of $190,765 with most of the rich stakes in the offing.

Last year Jones won $267,915 for the master of the Calvert Farm silks and that was enough to top the list of money winning owners. The all-time record of $475,091 also is held by Wright.

Pensive is likely to go postward as the 2-1 favorite for Saturday's $61,000 pot but, despite Jones' run of victories, the experts tell you that the man in the white hat from Missouri has no lock on the miles and three-sixteenths classic.

Down here in Maryland they are not forgetting George D. Widener's Platter, who won the Pimlico Futurity and Walden Stakes over the same track last fall. Bert Mullholland is mighty confident his initial start in the Preakness will be marked by success. And we must agree wit hhim despite the fact the colt has been out only once this season and that in a 6-furlong race. With Platter the probable second choice at 5-2, Stir Up from Mrs. Payne Whitney's Greentree barn probably will be third in line at 4-1.

Distance Stir Up's Best

Backers of the Whitney colt point out that the shorter distance of the Preakness will be in his favor as he weakened in the final drive in the Derby.

There also is support for Mrs. A. J. Abel's Gramps Image, conqueror of Pensive in the Chesapeake; Gay Bit, Baltimore-owned horse from Robert Bruce Livie's Bobanet Stable; A. C. Ernst's Alorter, who is expected to benefit by the shift in riders to Georgie Woolf, and Mrs. Ethel D. Jacobs' Stymie, whose entry was phoned in from New York by Trainer Hirsch Jacobs today.

Today's feature at Pimlico, the sixth running of the Carroll Handicap for fillies and mares, went to Mrs. R. H. Heighe's Adroit, who led from the gate to the finish line to earn a purse of $4150.

The 4-year-old daughter of Aethelstan led Houghton P. Metcalf's Star Copy by three-fourths of a length, while the latter held a two-length margin over Vincent Cicero's Royal Flush.

Mrs. B. S. Campbell's Barbara Childs was fourth in the field of four.

The winner was ridden by Lloyd Knapp and covered the 6 furlongs in 1:12 1-5 on a fast track.

She was second choice in the wagering and returned $5 and $2.40 for $2 at the mutuels.

Ace Limits Detroit to Seven Blows

New York, May 11 (AP).—Hank Borowy extended his carry-over winning streak to 11 straight as the New York Yankees defeated the Detroit Tigers, 5?2, today before a crowd of 5407 paid admissions.

Borowy allowed the Tigers seven hits to win his fourth game this season. He wound up last year winning his last seven.

The Yankees collected 13 hits, making 5 of them in the third inning to score our runs. Borowy began it himself with a single, Snuffy Stirnweiss and Bud Metheny followed with safe bunts and Hank scored the first run on Ed Levy's force play. After Nick Etten forced Levy at second, Don Savage executed the third safe bunt of the inning to squeeze Stirnweiss home. Johnny Lindell then clouted a triple to drive in the fourth run of the inning.

The New Yorkers scored their final run in the sixth on Rollie Hemsley's single, Borowy's fielder's choice, a double by Stirnweiss and Metheney's long fly which score Borowy.

The Tigers scored their runs in the first and ninth innings. They tallied in the first on Hemsley's wild throw attempting to prevent Doc Cramer from stealing third, and their final run was the result of Jimmy Outlaw's double and Pau Richard's single.

Lefty Frank Overmire suffered his fourth loss without a win. The Yankees have not been beaten by a lefthander this year, having now triumphed over both southpaws thrown against them.

Reds Stage Rally in 8th to Top Giants, 4-3

Cincinnati, May 11 (AP).—The Cincinnati Reds scored three runs in the eighth inning to defeat the Giants today, 4-3, for their second straight over the New Yorkers.

A two-base hit to center by Steve Mesner drove in Estel Crabtree and Eddie Miller for the deciding tallies. Crabtree had previously doubled to score Woody Williams with the first run of the inning.

Clyde Shoun, Reds southpaw, was the winning pitcher, though he worked only one and one-third inning. Rub Fischer went all the way for the Giants and was charged with his second defeat.

The Giants were the first to score when Phil Weintraub hit a home run with a man on base. The Reds came back in their half of that inning to score one run.

The Giants scored their final run in the ninth and had two runners stranded on bases when Ernie Lombardi hit into a game-ending forceout.

Cubs Snap 13-Game Losing Streak, Beating Phils, 5 to 3

Chicago, May 11 (AP).—The Chicago Cubs, aided by the seven-hit pitching of Eddie Hanyzewski, snapped a 13-game losing streak today by defeating the Philadelphia Phillies, 5 to 3, for their first victory since the opening day of the season, more than three weeks ago.

It was also their first triumph under the direction of Charlie Grimm, who took over management of the club after Jimmy Wilson resigned.

The Cubs broke out with 11 hits off Wewpie Barrett and Chet Covington, the barrage including bill Nicholson's first home run of the year in the seventh inning. Nick also collected a single to pace his team's attack.

Ron Northey's second homer and Elvin Adams' third accounted for the first two Philly runs. The other came in the sixth when Northey singled, took second on a wild pitch, moved to third on tony Lupien's fly and scored on Bob Finley's infield out.

The Cubs knocked Barrett out in the fifth with three straight singles which scored Nicholson with the fourth Bruin run. They notched their first marker in the third when Phil Cavarretta scored on Nicholson's long fly after doubling.

Singles by Len Merullo, Billy Holm and Cavarretta gave the Cubs two runs in the fourth.

Adroit, $5, Scores in Top at Pimlico

14,000 See Filly Lead Throughout

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Pimlico, Md., May 11—Fillies and mares held the spotlight here today and with Calumet Farm's Twilight Tear in her barn, Mrs. R. H. Heighe's Adroit proved best of a quartet of gal horses. The 4-year-old filly led every jump of the six furlongs and won by three parts of a length over H: P. Metcalf's Star Copy. Two length farther back came Vincent Cicero's Royal Flush to be third. One other was in the lineup—Mrs. B. S. Campbell's Barbara Childs.

Star Copy, making her 1944 debut and always a star over this track, was installed the favorite an das a result Adroit paid her backers a $5 mutuel. Under Jockey Lloyd Knapp's riding, the winner was clocked in 1.12 1-5. A crowd of 14,000 saw the event.

Adroit was away winging and Star Copy moved up approaching the stretch. The two ran head and head to the eighth pole and then Adroit drew out smartly. Royal Flush rallied mildly as did Barbara Childs.

Quarter Moon Wins Easily

H. L. Straus' Quarter Moon with Jockey Jackie Westrope up, was an easy winner of the Equipet Purse, the day's secondary feature. The fleet 3-year-old took command at the first jump and Westrope sat still all the way. Max Wexler's Bomb Sight was second, two and a half lengths behind the winner and two lengths ahead of Vincent Cicero's Gold River in the field of six going 6 furlongs. Quarter Moon paid a mere $3 and was clocked in 1:12 4-5.

A. C. Bostwick's Merchantman was a length winner in the day's steeplechase, located third on the program. The son of Mate, ridden by Jockey J. Smiley, returned $5.60 and was clocked in 3:58 3-5. Thomas T. Mott's Meeting House was second and 10 lengths in advance of W. G. Jones' Treford. Only five competed. There were mishaps except shaky landings. Merchantman and Meeting House fought it out on the front end most of the way, with the winner drawing out on the final flat run.

BETWEEN RACES — Whitey Abel has engaged Apprentice Jockey Leonard Bowers to ride his Gramps Image in the Preakness. Bowers won the Chesapeake with the colt. . . Crompton Smith, Virginia horseman, has been named patrol judge at Charles Town, which opens Monday with a 1 o'clock post time. . . . Jockey Peewee Quattlebaum has retired from the saddle again. But he will be back. . . . Harold Bester, Mr. Big of the Hagerstown track, wil lbe the guest of Gil Haus, local official, for the Preakness. . . . Charley Feltner is shipping 20 horses to Charles Town. . . . When Gay Bit was called running fourth in the Kentucky Derby broadcast, he was last and five lengths off the fifteenth horse. He passed 11 horses in an eighth of a mile aproaching the stretch. . . . I don't want this meeting to close without praising the pony boy work by Outrider Eddie Benham and Johnny shanks. . . . The jumping race scheduled for tomorrow didn't fill and was called off . . . which is just as well.

Alice Longworth May Alter Views But Not Her Politics Guests Tell Lady Wiseman

"MRS. LONGWORTH is a Democrat now—isn't she?" The serious expression on the face of one of the prettiest current visitors to Washington proved she wasn't joking. She was Lady Wiseman, wife of Sir William Wiseman, and she asked the question shortly after Mrs. Nicholas Longworth arrived at a dinner at the 1925 F Street Club the other evening.

Mrs. Longworth

"Alice, a Democrat! Never!" chorused a half dozen dyed-in-the-wool Republicans.

"But I thought she changed her views some time ago," Lady Wiseman went on, softly. "I heard that——"

"Alice may change her views . . . but never her political party," somebody put in. And certainly the conversation that ensued seemed to bear out that point. Time and again, as is the case at almost any Washington get-together, talk turned on the political picture . . . and I must say the Republicans present—and there were plenty of them besides Mrs. Longworth—seemed pretty happy about Republican prospects for 1945.

Dinner hosts were Mr. and Mrs. Henry Luce and guests included a liberal share of celebrities. Ranking guests were the Minister of Switzerland and Mme. Bruggmann, who observed a discreet silence when either national or international issues came up for discussion.

As an envoy from a neutral nation, Minister Bruggmann refrained from expressing any opinion about the war, and Mme. Bruggmann, who happens to be the sister of Vice President Wallace, listened attentively to anti-New Deal remarks, but diplomatically replied to them with only an engaging smile.

SENATOR AND MRS. ROBERT TAFT, just returned from Ohio, gave first-hand reports on their home State's presidential primary.

Representative Joe Martin was telling another guest about priorities on railroad travel to be established during the political conventions.

"Members of Congress aren't on the priority list at all," he said. "First, are the convention delegates; then the press, then convention officials. If there are any seats left over after that, the Congressmen can have them . . . but there may not be enough left to go around."

"If I want to get to either convention, I wouldn't worry about that," said dapper Representative Joseph Baldwin.

"Well, I wouldn't be particularly worried about it, either," Joe Martin replied with a chuckle.

THE DINNER COMPANY gathered in the garden of the club, and stayed until, as Sir William Wissman said, "Somebody will have to make a speech to clear the place. That's the way," he added, "it is done in the House of Commons. A boring speaker rises and starts talking. Within five minutes his audience has dissolved."

"I believe it's understood there are to be no political arguments this evening," said Gen. Patrick Hurley with a twinkle, shortly after he arrived and surveyed the group of political notables.

"Positively, none at all. Nobody here would be interested," smiled the hostess as she stepped up to greet William Bullitt.

Col. James Marshall McHugh and his wife, Maxine Davis, the writer, talked over "moving troubles" with Gen. Louis McCarthy Little and Lieut. Col. Matthew Jones. Having recently sold their Georgetown home and purchased another just around the corner, the McHughs will be at their new address Monday.

"The same day," wailed Maxine, "that I'm scheduled to finish my book." The latter, incidentally, is a collection of her published articles on medical subjects, many of which have been rewritten and reedited for inclusion in one volume.

MRS. PATRICK HURLEY was receiving verbal bouquets on all sides about her recent starring apperance as a model at the Stage Door Canteen style show. "Well, they had to have at least one grandmother in the show," she said modestly, "because there were so many grandmothers in the audience."

Others at the party included Mrs. Luce's house guest, Mrs. Jack Wilshire of Greenwich, Conn., stopping off here for a brief visit en route back home after spending the winter in Aiken; Mrs. Corerre Barbour, Mme. Lombard, Gen. Louis McCarthy Little, Brig. C. L. Lindemann of the British Embassy, and Sam Pryor. After dinner several other friends, including Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, joined the company.

OVER THE COFFEE: Mrs. Longworth brought out one of the most exquisite cigarette cases I've ever seen—a chased gold alongated box, with a diamond circled medallion on top, centered with a portrait of Edward VII of England. "It was a wedding gift from King Edward," she said. "I ran across it the other day and decided to bring it out for use once more. I'm quite proud of it." She should be.

Mrs. Curtin Honor Guest At Luncheons

In accord with her avowed intention of meeting as many Americans as possible during her visit here, Mrs. John Curtin, wife of Australia's Prime Minister, is having a busy time of it this week.

Yesterday Australia's First Lady met a representative group of official Washingtonians at the luncheon given by Mrs. Barnet Nover and Wednesday she journeyed to Capitol Hill for a similar date, her hostess being Representative Margaret Chase Smith of Maine.

Mrs. Nover's luncheon took place at the Carlton. Guests included Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, Mrs. Owen J. Roberts, Mrs. William O. Douglas, Senora de Michels, Lady Dixon, Mrs. Paul V. McNutt, Mrs. Joseph E. Davies, Mrs. Harry S. Truman, Mrs. Harris Ellsworth, Mrs. Wade Haislip, Mrs. William S. Culbertson, Senora de Munilla, Mrs. Clarence Lee Miller, Mrs. William Marcy and Mrs. Ray Henle.

The luncheon Wednesday was of the type that Representative Smith likes to give, informal in tone and held in the House Restaurant. Those she invited to meet Mrs. Curtin were Representative Mary T. Norton of New Jersey, Representative Edith Nourse Rogers of Massachusetts, Representative Frances P. Bolton of Ohio, Representative Clare Booth Luce of Connecticut, and Capt. Mildred McAfee, Wave commander. Lady Dixon was in attendance and Representative Winifred Stanley of New York who was entertaining guests at another table dropped by to speak with the honor guest.

Also stopping at the table were Speaker Sam Rayburn, Minority Leader Joseph W. Martin, jr., Majority Leader John W. McCormack and Representative Robert Hale of Maine. Before lunch Mrs. Curtin visited the Senate Gallery accompanied by Senator Owen Brewster of Maine and later went on to the House gallery.

Mrs. Curtin left late yesterday afternoon for Philadelphia, where she will attend the final meetings of the International Labor Office convention. She will go from there to New York, returning to Washington early next week.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Married 22 Years, to Successful Businessman, Wife Has Strange Complaint: He Must Have Her Constantly Beside Him, After He Leaves Office

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I hesitate to present my problem but feel I need counsel. I am 48; have been married 22 years; my husband is a college man with two degrees and is now 50. He is a successful professional man and has an administrative assistant and two secretaries. He goes to his office early and leaves promptly at 3 p. m.,—at which time he requests me to meet him daily.

He seems to want me with him every minute he is not at work in his office. If I go to a luncheon or Red Cross meeting, I must break away in time to meet him at 3 o'clock. If I must stay home for any reason, my name is the first word he calls when he opens the front door at 3:15. He often tells me he hopes he dies first. He says he would be more than half-dead if I should depart this world before him, and he could not go on living half-dead.

He Provides Lavishly; She Feels Parasitical

If he takes a walk, I must go also. If he listens to the radio, I must listen also. If he works on office business at home, I must sit in the same room. If we play bridge, I must be his partner. If I go to my room, he follows to sit there and read his paper. Perhaps it sounds ridiculous to complain of such conduct; but there are days when I should like to have time to myself, to do as I please. I believe I was happier when he was not so successful, as I did not feel like such a parasite. I am not even allowed to cook dinner on the maid's night out, as my husband wants me in the living room with him, not in the kitchen.

My husband is not the affectionate type. He just wants me present. He is not jealous, but rather proud, if any other man compliments me; and he is very good to me in a material way, making lavish gifts to me when all I want is a minute to myself. We have a lovely daughter who is away at college this year. Before she went away, she would stay with her daddy or talk a walk with him, so that I didn't have to be with him every minute. But since she has been in college, I feel as if I have no life of my own. What do you advise? L. M. R.

His Is Behavior Of Anxious Child

DEAR L. M. R.: Your husband's performance is that of a frightened child clinging to his mother's skirts. It means that he is subconsciously afflicted with an anxiety neurosis,—the origin, nature, significance and very existence of which is unknown to his conscious mind. In all probability, it had its inception in some deeply disturbing early childhood experience, or distressing chain of events, closely associated (in his buried memories) with his relationship to his mother.

Did he, in moments of outraged revolt against either her iron rule or sticky sentimental solicitude, wish her dead, so that he could be "free" of her, to assert himself along lines of spontaneous impulse? And instantly recoil with guilty horror from that (to his child mind) murderous thought,—fearing that if she did die, soon, he would be in some manner morally responsible, for having authored the wish with silent fervor? Was he reared in poverty, in a home atmosphere of great economic insecurity or social inferiority? Were his parents divorced, early in his life?

Conduct Signifies Neurotic Complex

SUCH factors are known to give rise to inexpressible feelings of anxiety and insecurity in the breast of a child. And these feelings find typical expression in a child's seemingly irrational objection to letting the mother out of his sight, which is related to fear that she may die or disappear and leave him utterly bereft and defenseless in a cruelly foreboding world.

Unquestionably your husband has carried over from his childhood to the present time, a combination of fears which the psychologists call a "complex," that accounts for his obsessive dependence upon your society as an aid to relaxation. Unquestionably, also, he clings to you more as "mother" than mate (since he is neither jealous nor loverlike in his devotion); which suggests that, at the core of his complex, he has identified you with his mother. The implication of his behavior is that he loved his mother too much or too little; and that whatever he felt for her, he now projects upon you.

Unconscious Drives Assume False Faces

YOUR husband has as great need to be freed from the neurotic compulsion to dog your footsteps, as you have need to be relieved of his close pursuit. A psychiatrist should be your source of advice in the matter. For instance, in his book "On Being a Real Person," Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick cites a case of a young woman whose life had become a waking nightmare, due to fear that her mother might die. Psycho-analytic inquiry into her distress established the fact that the girl's fear was resentment disguised. Her desire for personal independence was at war with a sense of duty to her mother. At the core of her complex, she was combatting an impulse to wish that her mother would die! When this irrational impulse of the conscienceless subconscious was disclosed to her, the fear disappeared, and she was able to work out a civilized and mutually beneficial solution of the situation. Given similar psychiatric assistance, I am sure your husband could soon cure his phobia, too. M. H.

Miss Strauss Advocates Women at Peace Table

By Genevieve Reynolds

"There is bound to be more government after the war than before. Just what form it will take, simple or complicated, depends upon the people," predicts Miss Anna Lord Strauss, new president of the National League of Women Voters.

"People must wake up to the fact that government will be an important factor in their lives," she declared at a press conference held yesterday at league headquarters.

Tall, silvery haired, a great granddaughter of Lucretia Mott, distinguished suffrage pioneer, Miss Strauss pointed out that the league is concentrating on the forthcoming elections.

It's purpose is to guide citizens in insisting that well-qualified persons return to office. That means electing people who have the general interest of the country, rather than any particular section, at heart.

Wants Women at Peace Table

Asked about women's place at the peace table, she replied that women should be there, for they have definite contributions to make.

Throughout the year the league has advocated United States participation in plans and machinery for world-wide relief and rehabilitation, for handling economic, social and political problems. The league also wants United States membership in a general organization eventually to include all peoples, regardless of race, religion or political persuasion, for peaceful settlement of disputes with power to prevent or stop aggression.

Also on the league's list for emphasis during the coming year are a war and postwar program based as far as possible on tax revenues, which takes into account control of inflation, fair distribution of the tax burden and minimizing postwar dislocations.

Discusses Insurance Program

Latest additions to the league's agenda are recognition and support of development of the social insurance program, which includes extension of coverage, benefits and illness and disability and nationalization of unemployment compensation. Second addition is a policy for economic stability which takes into account demobilization of armed forces, reconversion of industry, full employment, mutual responsibilities of labor and management.

Commenting on the insurance program, Miss Strauss declared: "Extension of coverage of old-age and unemployment insurance benefits is not new to the league program. Authorization to support an extension of the insurance program to provide benefits for disability is new.

The item as phrased still precludes league support of Government-sponsored programs for medical care and envisages a Government program of insurance that would pay benefits to employed persons and perhaps their dependents for illness and disability, much as private insurance schemes function, such insurance to be financed by payroll taxes."

Was Magazine Editor

Shortly after taking over the presidency, Miss Strauss, on behalf of the league, issued a statement to the House Committee on Banking and Currency urging the committee to report a bill extending the authority to control prices without serious modification of the present law.

An editor by profession, this slender, keen-eyed woman served for six years with Century magazine. Part of the time she was assistant managing editor.

Her chief interests in public affairs are governmental and economic problems. Miss Strauss has a long record of active league work. She served as vice president of the National League for six years and held the presidency of the New York City League for the same length of time. When named president at the recent Chicago convention she was serving on the league's national board.

War has twice brought her to Washington. During World War I she was employed by the War Shipping Board, War Trade Board and later the United States State Department. Also she took a turn of duty with the NRA and the New York Department of Labor. Now she's here to carry on the league's work.

Excelling in squash tennis, sailing and skating, she hopes to find time to continue these sports. A firm believer in exercise, she thinks it is a "must" to keep fit.

As her contribution to the war, Miss Strauss has been in the personnel division of United Aircraft at Stanford, Conn., giving special attention to the problems of absenteeism.

Springtime Favorites Make Their Bow With Strawberries and Asparagus

Strawberries and asparagus have fleeting ways. This is due both to their popular appeal and short growing seasons. So make use of them while they are in the market.

Martha Ellyn

Strawberries are tops in Vitamin C. They rank right along with the citrus fruits as one of the best sources of this vitamin. One generous helping of ripe strawberries is thought to be sufficient to furnish the day's requirements for this vitamin.

Strawberries are lower in price because of the ceiling placed on them by OPA. Orchids to OPA for getting around to this chore before the season was over. If they keep on giving honorable discharges to foods, or at least furloughs, and place ceilings on such foods as strawberries, they will be considered as the fairest of the fair-haired, by the homemakers.

Strawberries and cereal, sugar and cream, that's a combination that gives breakfast a spring sparkle as well as a goodly amount of minerals and vitamins. Build them into such a menu as the following one and you will have satisfied customers as well as properly nourished ones.

Breakfast Menu

Strawberries on Cornflakes
with Cream
Bread Crumb Omelet Bacon
Hot Biscuits Honey
Coffee

FOODS THAT BLOOM IN THE SPRING, TRA LA, inspired Suzy to make use of asparagus and strawberries. Here, Suzy is sifting enriched flour making ready to bake Tuna Fish Biscuit Puffs that she will fill with creamed asparagus, and crunchy biscuits to make strawberry shortcake

The omelet can be made from those extra slices of bread that are always present in every bread box. Make it this way:

BREAD CRUMB OMELET

Add ⅛ teaspoon pepper to 4 egg yolks. Beat slightly. Add ½ cup soft bread crumbs, firmly packed. Add ½ teaspoon salt to 4 egg whites and beat stiff, but not dry. Fold the crumb and yolk mixture into the whites. Heat in a skillet, 1 tablespoon fat, butter, margarine or other fat, and pour in omelet mixture. Level surface gently. Place a cover on skillet and cook over sufficiently low heat so that the bottom of the omelet is only lightly browned after 15 minutes of cooking. Cook until the surface is dry when touched lightly with finger tip, and knife inserted in center comes out clean, about 25 minutes. Fold and serve on warm platter. Serves 4.

Then there's strawberry shortcake that is always a winner as a dessert. Let your conscience be your guide as to the type of cake. But, if you want REAL shortcake make with fluffy biscuit dough and not cake. Also, it is not whipped cream but plain cream that is supposed to be served on shortcake. So don't lament the passing of whipped cream for this reason.

Let's have a dinner starred with both asparagus and strawberries. Here's a menu that will be a deviation from the usual one of meat and potatoes.

Dinner Menu

Tuna Fish Biscuit Puff
with Fresh Asparagus
Hot Deviled Eggs
Bread Butter or Margarine
Strawberry Shortcake
Beverage

Be sure to use sifted enriched flour for making both the Tuna Puff and the rosettes. The recipes follow:

TUNA FISH PUFFS

Sift together 2 cups sifted enriched flour, 3 teaspoons baking powder and 1 teaspoon salt. Cut or rub in 2 to 4 tablespoons shortening. Add 2 tablespoons chopped parsley and 1 cup flaked tuna fish (1 7-ounce can). Mix well. Add 1 cup milk and mix until flour is moistened. Drop biscuit dough by tablespoonfuls on greased baking sheet to form oval biscuit puff. Bake in moderately hot oven, 400 degrees 20 to 25 minutes. Fold 1½ cups cooked cut asparagus into 1½ cups medium white sauce. Heat thoroughly. To serve fill center of Tuna Fish Biscuit Puff with the creamed asparagus. Yield, 4 to 6 servings.

Garden Party, Perfect Day Charm Guests

Some 200 guests from official and diplomatic society were invited by Senator Joseph Guffey and his sisters, the Misses Pauletta and Ida Guffey, to meet Vice President and Mrs. Henry Wallace yesterday. The garden party at the Guffey's pleasant home set down on the fringe of Rock Creek Park on Benton pl.

A little later in the season and the famous roses would have been blossoming in the Guffey garden; a little earlier, and guests would have had opportunity to admire the pink and white dogwood which flowers profusely over the greensward.

But it's "a green garden the year around" said Miss Guffey yesterday, and certainly it couldn't have been prettier yesterday in its green dress of spring shot with sunshine of a perfect May day.

For the Vice President it was in the nature of a farewell party, for he is to be off shortly for a visit to far-away China.

The Chinese Ambassador and Mme. Wei were among the guests yesterday and others were the Turkish Ambassador with Mme. Ertegun who took her place at one end of the buffet table to pour tea; the Ambasador of Yugoslavia and Mme. Fotitch, the latter also at the tea table for a time; the Norwegian Ambassador, just back from a stay in London, and Mme. Morgenstierne, another lady who presided at the tea table.

Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, wife of the Chief Justice, had been asked to take over the pleasant duties of assisting, and also serving during the course of the afternoon was Mme. Rybar, wife of the retiring Counselor of the Yugoslav Embassy.

Fifth District Banks' Net Up 26% in Year

By S. Oliver Goodman

Net earnings of 458 banks in the Fifth Federal Reserve District, including those in Washington, aggregated $20,660,800 in 1943 for an increase of 26.5 per cent over the previous year, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reported last night.

Largest factor in the sharp income rise, the Reserve Bank reported, was a gain of $10,048,000 in revenue derived from interest and dividends on securities. This item totaled $32,468,100 for the 428 banks, an increase of 44.8 per cent over the previous year.

Earnings on loans in 1943 decreased 18 per cent to $27,066,300; service charges on deposit accounts gained 17.3 per cent to $4,365,200; trust department earnings rose 0.7 per cent to $3,188,000, and all other earnings were up 6 per cent at $6,499,100.

On the other hand, expenses in 1943 rose only 1.8 per cent to $48,957,000.

Summarizing the outlook, the Richmond Reserve Bank commented:

"If it assumed that some further reduction will be effected in interest paid on time and savings deposits, and that increases in all other expenses continue to increase at the 1943 rate, the profit prospect for the District's banks seems as good or better for 1944 than in 1943.

"Earnings on securities can hardly be other than notably higher, while offsets from earnings on loans are not likely to occur this year in the same force as in 1943. Given a continuance of the going level of business, charge-offs would seem to diminish in importance and be more than offset by profits and recoveries . . ."

Wheat Breaks On Outlook for Bumper Crop

Chicago, May 11 (AP).—A big crop of winter wheat is coming to maturity in the Southwest, and grain traders, made aware of the production outlook by a Government crop report, today jumped to the selling side of wheat futures. The result was the worst break in several months, sending July and September contracts to new lows for two months or more, while December recorded a new seasonal low.

The break in wheat was coupled with an even more severe drop in rye, which fluctuated over a wide range during the session. At one time deferred rye contracts were off more than 4 cents a bushel. May hit a new low since February; July and September were lowest since December, 1943, and December established a new seasonal low.

Week's Store Sales Up 7%

Washington department store sales in the week ended May 6 were 7 per cent higher than in the corresponding week last year, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reported yesterday. The Fifth District as a whole showed a gain of 10 per cent for the week.

UAL Net Off in Period

United Air Lines, Inc., yesterday reported net income of $1,110,083 in the first quarter this year, equal to 66 cents a common share. This compares with $1,178,779 or 79 cents a share in the like 1943 period.

Increased operating expenses and lower passenger-express rates tended to offset a substantial gain in operating revenues, President W. A. Patterson pointed out. Gross revenues for the quarter were $7,235,615, against $5,769,355 in the corresponding 1943 period.

Figures for the period showed that UAL flew 90,995,471 passenger-miles for a gain of 30 per cent; 3,713,028 mail ton-miles for a gain of 57 per cent, and 907,502 express ton-miles for a gain of 7 per cent.

Western Union Net Gains

Western Union Telegraph Co. reports net income of $1,781,314 after charges for the first quarter, against $1,233,465 for the same period of 1943. Federal taxes on income amounted to $2,710,000, made up of $950,000 for estimated normal tax and surtax plus provisions of $1,760,000 for estimated excess profits tax after deducting postwar refund . In 1943 taxes of $765,000 were limited to normal tax and surtax.
